Fifth 'Fix' Attempt in Lewis Trial Revealed

Woman Juror Tells FBI of Phone Call; Convicted Gamblers File Appeal Notices

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The FBI uncovered evidence yesterday that at least five efforts were made to fix the jurors who convicted William "Snags" Lewis and two assoicates of operating a multi-million-dollar numbers lottery.

All jurors had been interviewed by the FBI by 3 p. m. yesterday, less than 15 hours after the verdict was reached, and agents came up with at least one hitherto undisclosed tampering.

A woman juror told investigators she was telephoned at her home by an unidentified female Tuesday night and told to vote for a not guilty verdict. The jury started deliberating Wednesday noon.

Lewis, alleged head of a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate; Attilio Acalotti, a news vendor already convicted for threatening a Government witness, and Frank Billeci, circulation man for the Washington Times-Herald, at the time of his arrest, were convicted after an 18-day trial climaxed by 19 hours of deliberation by seven men and five women jurors.

The FBI was ordered to investigate charges of jury tampering early Thursday morning, when District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff revealed he had been informed "several" women jurors were threatened and one had received a bribe offer of $300 for a "not guilty" vote.

The latest fix-attempt was described to the FBI in these terms, according to the woman juror:

"Someone called me to the phone by asking for me by my first name, as if she knew me. It sounded like a woman's voice, but it might have been disguised. Anyway I didn't know her."

"There was no threat and no offer of money, just contact. She started talking about the case, and then she wanted me to vote not guilty," the juror continued.

"But we had been so warned by his honor not to speak to anyone about the case that the minute she asked me to vote not guilty I hung up."

Previously, investigators knew of the existence of only four efforts to influence jurors.

One unidentified juror sent a note to Judge Holtzoff saying a woman telephoned her to ask her to be "light" with Acalotti. Another juror sent the judge a note telling of the bribe offer.

Two "wives," one accompanying and the other meeting the body of Col. William T. Babcock, deputy American commissioner for Berlin, came within a few hundred feet of each other at National Airport yesterday.

The women, who both claim to be "the" Mrs. William T. Babcock, are expected to see each other again today when funeral services for Colonel Babcock are started in Fort Myer Chapel at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Colonel Babcock, who had served in Germany since 1945, died in Berlin Monday of a heart attack.

On Wednesday Mrs. Florence Maryjean Babcock, attractive 32-year-old British born "wife," left Berlin in an Air Force plane bearing the body, along with Capt. Charles M. Foyle of the Berlin Military Post, who was assigned as military escort.

Foyle said the woman was "accepted in all circles in Berlin as his wife."

When the plane arrived at National Airport yesterday at 1 p. m., the British woman left the plane and was accompanied by Eugene D. Corkery of the Foreign Service Personnel Section, State Department, to the Statler Hotel. In leaving, she commented to Captain

Northerners Filibuster on Cotton Bill

FEPC Supporters, Dairy State Members Join Forces to Delay Action by House

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A Southern cotton bill yesterday ran into the same sort of filibustering tactics that Southern Congressmen used against the Fair Employment Practices Act earlier this week.

Two groups of Northern lawmakers—those seeking House action on FEPC and those from dairy States rankling over the repeal of taxes on oleomargarine—took part.

Three hours were allotted to general debate on the Cotton Act. Leaders expected to dispose of it yesterday. After five hours—from noon to 5 p. m.—the House quit with an hour and 15 minutes still to go. The rest of the time was taken up on quorum calls. When a sixth was asked at 5 o'clock, Agriculture Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) called quits until Monday.

The first quorum call was asked by Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.), of the Labor Committee, whose efforts to call the FEPC bill from the Ways and Means Committee were blocked this week by FEPC opponents using the same tactics. He rose to his point of order at 12:03—just three minutes after the House convened.

Call Takes 23 Minutes

The call took 23 minutes. Then within 15 minutes or at 12:44, Representative Andrew J. Biemiller (D., Wis.), a labor leader from America's leading dairy State, repeated the request. At 1:30 Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.); at 2:15, Representative August H. Anderson (R., Minn.); and at 3 p. m. Representative Chet Holifield (R., Calif.), forced the long-drawn-out roll-calls. The largest number to answer any call was 270 on Hoffman's action. The final quorum call was asked at 5 o'clock by Representative Eugene J. McCarthy (D., Minn.)—also representing a labor district in a dairy State.

The debate was marked by a standing ovation to Representative Stephen Pace (D., Ga.) a leader on the Agriculture Committee. Pace was hailed by Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) as one of the most valuable men in the House, just as Pace finished an appeal for the bill. McCormack said Pace planned to retire after this term. He urged that Pace's district insist that he return.

The cotton bill would cut inequalities in the cotton acreage allotment bill passed by the last session.

The new bill would limit the amount any individual farmer would be cut.

An attack on cotton growing was launched by Representative Reid Murray (R., Wis.), one of the bitterest battlers for butter in the recent oleo fight. Murray urged that last year's cut in cotton to 21 million acres be increased to 16 or 18.

Murray admitted frankly that he was angered by Southern support of the margarine tax repealer, and declared that "cotton farming is a sick industry, and amounts to about 5 percent of American agriculture."

"It's time," he shouted, "for the Southern farmers to stop farming the United States Treasury and start farming their farms."

President To Say If U.S. Gets Weapon

Urey, Baruch and Others Urge Going Ahead on Fearful Hydrogen Explosive

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday acknowledged that the problem of whether or not to construct a hydrogen bomb is before him.

He would make the decision, he said, and no one else.

The President's comments, made at his weekly news conference, were the first in which he acknowledged the existence of the super-bomb issue. Before, he had responded to questions about it with an invariable no comment.

On its face, his remark that he alone would make the momentous decision might have meant that he thought he had the exclusive right to determine the choice.

Means No Responsibility

Some of his listeners, however, did not take it this way. In the first place, they thought such an interpretation out of character for the President.

Second, they felt the response indicated more Mr. Truman's realization that the responsibility for the decision rested with the Presidency, and that he, as distinct from a growing number of self-appointed experts, had the underlying information.

The question put to him was:

"In the last two days one House member of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee and also an elder statesman have spoken out on the question of the super-bomb. Also many columns have been written about it. Is there anything authoritative you can give to the American people on it?"

Baruch Urged Project

No, said the President, there is nothing. He said he didn't think anybody else could give out anything authoritative on it. He added that he makes that decision and nobody else.

The reporter's reference to the "elder statesman" had to do with a comment given to the United Press earlier in the day by Bernard Baruch.

To a question on whether the United States should make the weapon, Baruch said:

"If you knew of any instrumentality to defend your life, would you try to get it? The question answers itself."

Asked whether he favored further negotiations with Russia on an international control plan, Baruch said, "we ought to be willing to listen to anything that Russia or anyone else has to propose."

Backed by Rep. Durham

The reporter's reference to a House member of the Congressional Atomic Committee had to do with a statement the previous day of Representative Carl T. Durham (D., N. C.), in favor of going ahead with the project.

Yesterday, Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, also called for prompt manufacture of the H-bomb lest Russia get it first.

Mr. Truman told his news conference he did not know when he would make his decision on the matter.

In answer to another question, Mr. Truman said he had not picked

Flares Spur Search for C-54 Lost in Yukon With 44 Aboard

Edmonton, Alberta, Jan. 27 (AP).—A homeward-bound United States Air Force C-54 transport was missing in the Yukon wilderness today with 44 persons.

Elmendorf Air Base at Anchorage, Alaska, reported the four-engine plane carried a mother and a child, 34 military personnel and a crew of eight. Identity of the mother and child was not disclosed, but they were believed dependents of a member of the Army or Air Force.

A Royal Canadian Air Force plane was sent this afternoon to scan an area about 33 miles north of Edmonton on the basis of a schoolteacher's report children saw a low-flying plane near there at 9 o'clock last night.

The plane took off from Anchorage for Great Falls, Mont., yesterday.

A report of night flares along the Alaska Highway provided a slim thread of hope in the search.

The RCAF said the last report from the plane was over Snag, Yukon Territory, at 5:09 last night. Snag is about 20 miles from the Alaska boundary.

An Elmendorf base spokesman said, however, the C-54 reported in to the big Whitehorse Air Base about 300 miles southeast of Snag.

Elmendorf authorities said the search is being concentrated between Whitehorse and Fort Nelson, B. C. Fort Nelson is 600 miles farther south on the Alaska Highway flight route.

More than a dozen American and Canadian planes were in the search with others standing by or preparing to take off.

An officer flying to Alaska reported flares near Watson Lake, south of Whitehorse, near the British Columbia boundary.

The Anchorage base said the pilot told of circling and dropping his own flares and receiving an answering flame. Officials indicated

U. S. Arming Of Europe Is Initiated; Pacts Signed

Master Defense Plan for Atlantic Nations Receives President's Approval

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday approved the strategic "master plan" of the North Atlantic Alliance, and so set in motion the billion-dollar American program for arming western Europe.

The President did not disclose details of the secret plan, which outlines what each of the 12 treaty signers will do in case of a Soviet attack against any of them.

He did say, though, that the plan provided for a genuine common defense; that the treaty allies would use their combined resources "with maximum efficiency," and would not use them "to develop separate and unrelated defenses."

"The North Atlantic Treaty is in itself a deterrent to aggression," said the President in a formal statement. "I believe that these recommendations which have been agreed to by the governments of the North Atlantic Treaty nations constitute a major achievement under the treaty.

"They provide further convincing evidence of the determination of these nations to resist aggression against any one of them, and are a definite indication of the genuine spirit of cooperation among the treaty members."

While the President was approving the strategic plan, 8 of the 12 treaty nations signed long-delayed agreements with the United States governing the uses of American military aid.

The eight countries—Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherland, Luxembourg, Italy, Norway and Denmark—are the ones that

Lehman Asks Loyalty Tests To Follow Democratic Forms

Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) last night demanded a more democratic procedure for determining the loyalty of Government employes, and lamented "all the shame and suffering needlessly visited" by the present loyalty board.

Loyalty findings, he declared, should be made only "after a judicial proceeding, with all the safeguards for the accused which Anglo-Saxon and American law provides."

At the second annual Roosevelt Dinner of the Washington chapter of Americans for Democratic Action—attended by some top Government figures—the Senator said:

"Some reactionaries would be satisfied only if there were public executions, at dawn and at dusk, of every Government employe caught in the act of having a liberal thought . . .

"Today . . . liberty is challenged not only by those who openly declare their allegiance to totalitarianism but also by some who solemnly declare their devotion to democracy . . . They insist that we must suppress free inquiry in order to preserve our institutions and our way of life."

"I judge this," said Lehman, "to be heresy of the worst kind."

The ADA dinner, at the Shoreham Hotel, also heard Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, well-known theologian, call for a liberal "third ground" of political thought for America—to the left of the free-

Truman Keeps Views on Hiss To Himself

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday declined to comment on the Alger Hiss case, telling reporters that their questions were not asked with good intent.

At the outset of a White House news conference, a radio reporter asked this question about the former State Department official who has been sentenced to five years in prison for perjury:

"Mr. President, regardless of the outcome in the upper courts, will you turn your back on Alger Hiss?"

No comment, the Chief Executive replied. He added that it was a nice question, but his tone suggested that he thought otherwise.

Mr. Truman was asked flatly a little later if he approved of Secretary of State Acheson's statement on Wednesday: "I do not in-

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 27 (AP).—Democrats from 13 Southern and border States—with leading 1948 anti-Trumanites excluded—meet here in a crowded one-day "unity" conference tomorrow.

Widow Would Wed Convicted Slayer Of His Two Wives

Detroit, Jan. 27 (AP).—A 39-year-old widow today asked permission to marry Bernard Niedzialkowski, twice convicted in the slayings of two previous wives.

He is in jail awaiting a life prison sentence.

"I love Bernard," Mrs. Mary Schmidt, mother of three children, told sheriff Andrew Baird.

"If you and the courts and detectives knew him like I do, you wouldn't be sending him to prison."

Mrs. Schmidt said the parents of the 37-year-old slayer promised a home for her and her children if she marries their son.

Federal Regime May Assume Rule Over West Java

Jakarta, Java, U. S. I., Jan. 27 (AP).—The cabinet of restive West Java resigned today and a parliamentary move developed to place the state's problems in the hands of the federal government.

The federal government already has taken over supreme authority in East Java. Republicans seek the return of both states.

West Java's premier, Anwar Tjokroaminoto, was arrested Wednesday on suspicion of trying to overthrow the federal government. His cabinet resigned with the statement that it no longer feels it represents the people.

The state parliament accepted the resignation 32 to 20 and decided to discuss Saturday a motion to give up authority and hand over state affairs to Premier Mohamed Hatta's regime in Jakarta.

Big-Time Annual Gaming Toll Is $21.5 Billion, Group Says

Boston, Jan. 27 (U.P.).—Big-time gambling takes up to $21,500,000,000 a year out of American pockets, a group of Bostonians reported today after a Nation-wide investigation.

The Citizens' Committee of Massachusetts, Inc., whose letterhead bears some of Boston's best names, said in a 46-page report that figure does not even include the proceeds of such forms of gambling as lotteries, raffles and carnival games.

It charged that big-time gambling is controlled and operated in business-like fashion by organized syndicates which ultimately have "a corrupting influence on good government and the welfare of the community in general."

The committee said its investigators estimated that from $11,800,000,000 to $21,500,000,000 is spent each year on horse and dog race betting, sports pools, numbers pools and slot machines.

The gambling estimates were broken down this way:

Parimutuel betting—$1,500,000,000.

Off-the-track betting—Three billion to 10 billion dollars.

Sports pools—Five billion dollars.

Numbers pools—300 million to two billion dollars.

Slot machines—Two billion to three billion dollars.

250 Telephone Installers Pull Wildcat Strike

A "wildcat" walkout of 250 switchboard installation men, employed by Western Electric, yesterday halted all installation work at Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. central stations.

There was no interference or break in telephone service.

The telephone equipment installation workers, affiliated with Local 96, Division 6, CIO Communication Workers of America, walked off their jobs at 3 p. m. in protest—their leaders said—against the "attitude" of Western Electric on a new contract and grievances. They are expected back to work Monday.

Most of the strikers were at work on installing the long-distance dial system at C. & P.'s main building, 725 13th st. nw. Others walked off installation jobs at C. & P. stations at 14th and Columbia rd.; 629 B st. ne.; 77 U st. nw., at the Pentagon and the Commerce Department Buildings.

FEPC Compromise Rejected; Republicans Split With Powell

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday backed up his original FEPC recommendations as prospects of forcing the antidiscrimination bill to a House vote by discharge petition received another sharp setback.

Mr. Truman rejected Southern overtures for an FEPC "compromise" at his press-radio conference by referring newsmen to his civil rights message to Congress.

Angered at what they called an effort to "put us on the spot," House Republicans meanwhile balked at signing either the Roosevelt or Powell FEPC "discharge" petitions.

A letter from Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) setting a Wednesday morning deadline for Republicans to say whether they will sign his petition touched off the latest bitter FEPC flurry.

Representative Paul W. Shafer (R., Mich.), tore up Powell's letter on the floor of the House, saying: "Here is what I think of his demands and his implied threats."

"We can't sign Roosevelt's petition (filed Monday by Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., Democrati-Liberal, N. Y.) and now we won't sign Powell's," Shafer told newsmen.

A cross-section of Republicans, who mostly declined to be quoted, echoed Shafer's "resentment."

House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.), in charge of the FEPC bills, predicted the measure will be called up in the House on a "calendar Wednesday." Lesinski said he never believed enough Republicans would sign a discharge petition to get FEPC before the House by the petition route. (218 members, a majority of the House, must sign either the Powell or Roosevelt petitions to take it from a Rules Committee pigeonhole.)

Representative John A. Carroll (D., Colo.), a member of a Democratic FEPC "strategy committee," said Republicans were looking for an "excuse" not to sign.

He termed the GOP protests "political subterfuge that will fool no one."

Said Carroll:

"If they (the Republicans) are sincere, they ought to sign one petition or the other. If they sign Powell's, we on the Roosevelt petition will be glad to transfer our signatures."

Mr. Truman stood pat for FEPC in answer to a press conference

Negotiations on Coal Wages To Resume Here Wednesday

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

In the first significant coal peace move in weeks, John L. Lewis and the dominant operators' association agreed to meet here Wednesday to renew long-dead contract negotiations.

Lewis accepted the offer of the Northern-Western producers to revive negotiations; the operators accepted the date suggested by Lewis, but not the time.

The operators observed that John L. was due in District Court here at 10 a. m. Wednesday to tell the judge why the United Mine Workers should not be restrained from coercing the mine owners in accepting an allegedly illegal contract.

Therefore, the spokesman of the operators' group wrote John L., perhaps it would be better to meet at the Statler Wednesday at 2 p. m. Lewis hastened to reply that his lawyers could handle the injunction suit filed by Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, so that it would be no "inconvenience" to himself to meet the operators at 10 a. m.

However, the president of the UMW added that either at 10 a. m. or 2 p. m. he would be ready to conform to the wishes of the operators.

With this possible break in the coal dispute in the offing, President Truman sat tight yesterday on his thus-far steadfast policy of avoiding direct intervention in the coal controversy. He has been under increasing pressure to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act in order to break up the Lewis tactic of a three-day work week and

Welfare Board Offers 'Mr. X' As Successor to Tramburg

The Board of Public Welfare has "unanimously" recommended a successor to department director John W. Tramburg and has sent its recommendation to the District Commissioners.

Edgar Morris, chairman of the board, announced this at the end of a four-hour closed session of the board yesterday. He said he would leave it up to the Commissioners to reveal the candidate's name.

Morris added, however, that the board was not recommending a man whose name it had previously submitted. This would apparently eliminate Raymond F. Clapp, principal assistant to the director whose appointment to the post was vetoed by the Commissioners before Tramburg was selected in May, 1948. Tramburg is leaving February 24 to become director of welfare for the State of Wisconsin.

The board also has sent to the Commissioners a request for a $92,000 deficiency appropriation.

Tramburg said that if the appropriation is not forthcoming, the board must institute at least an 8 percent cutback in relief grants. Action on such a cut was deferred until April 1, pending consideration of the request.

Tramburg released figures showing the board received 444 new requests for public assistance in November, and 432 in December. It was carrying 6538 cases at the end of November, and 6675 at year's end.

The uptrend in relief loads has already forced the department to institute cutbacks totalling 12 percent in relief payments. The original payments were based on 1948 living costs and vary according to minimums for living essentials per number of persons in a family.

AB&W Workers Reject Strike Peace Offer

AFL drivers and mechanics yesterday rejected, by referendum vote, a "basis for settlement" of their seven months' strike against the A. B. & W. bus lines, operating between nearby Virginia and the District.

Of 330 eligible voters, 180 cast ballots against the peace proposal, 112 for, and 7 ballots were voided.

The "basis for settlement" included a 10-cent-an-hour raise in pay, and a reduction in the platform work week, from 42½ to 40 hours.

Opponents complained the proposal did not provide for retroactivity of the benefits to July when the men walked out.

A spokesman said the men will continue working as they have since the Commonwealth of Virginia seized the transit line under a State public utility act the moment the strike went into effect.

ECA Nations Act To Free Trade From Controls

Paris, Jan. 27 (AP).—Representatives of 18 European Marshall aid areas today adopted a policy to free private trade of government controls.

The new system to stimulate commerce was put forward in response to United States demands for a "free market in Europe."

A French suggestion to free 75 percent of all nongovernment shipments of raw materials, food and manufactured goods from controls by the end of this year was reported adopted.

Exact details of the policy were not made public.

A policy committee, composed of seven nations serving as the consultative group of the organization for European Economic Cooperation studied also a plan for creating a central clearing house for dealings with each other.

Hotel in New York Ends 5-Week Hunt For 'Lost' Well

New York, Jan. 27 (NYHT). — The Ambassador Hotel's five-week search under its subbasement floor for an elusive water well—covered over and lost track of when the hotel was built in 1916 — ended shortly after 3 p. m. today.

An engineer lifted the final barrier—a slab of rock—from the top of a rusted well casing eight inches in diameter and discovered the well was almost full of water.

The hunt started over a month ago and was prompted by the city's water shortage.

The hotel was built on the original site of a brewery that used well water in its brews.

1951 Budget Raised By $358,874,294

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday added $308,874,294 in cash and 50 million dollars in borrowing authority to his budget requests for fiscal year 1951.

At the same time, he asked Congress for an extra $854,453,000 in cash and 15 million dollars in contract authority to tide various Federal agencies through the current fiscal year which ends June 30.

Most of the latter request had been anticipated in budget figures, and therefore will not increase Federal spending in the current fiscal year much above previous estimates.

But the new 1951 requests may be reflected in an even larger Federal deficit than the $5,100,000,000 which Mr. Truman forecast in his original budget message earlier this month.

Major Changes in '51 Budget

Here are the major changes he recommended in his 1951 budget, and his reasons for asking them:

Three hundred and twenty million dollars more for the Army to spend on economic aid to occupied Japan, education of children of Americans stationed in Japan; and "reorientation" of the Japanese people.

Fifty million dollars in borrowing authority and $2,475,000 in cash for the rural Electrification Administration to carry out the rural telephone installation program adopted by Congress last year.

$2,902,594 for United States contributions to expenses of the United Nations and the Pan American Union, which ran higher than expected.

A reduction of $16,300,000 in the original request for the atomic energy program. Some construction projects planned for 1951 have been speeded up, and Mr. Truman earlier this week asked for 87 million dollars in supplemental 1950 funds to do the work now.

Among major changes which Mr. Truman asked in spending totals for the current 1950 fiscal year were:

$232,000,000 for the Veterans' Administration to pay increased benefits to disabled veterans and their dependents, authorized by Congress last year. (Earlier this week he asked $800,000,000 in extra funds for the VA to meet the "still rising" costs of training former servicemen under the GI Bill of Rights.)

$24,600,000 for "miscellaneous" veterans' benefits, including the special homes recently authorized for paraplegics.

$46,000,000 for the Federal Security Agency to spend in grants to States for public assistance of the needy

$24,747,000 for the Postoffice Department to meet higher costs.

$5,000,000 in cash and $15,000,000 in contract authority for the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics to build supersonic wind tunnels at Moffett Field, Calif., and Langley Field, Va.

In answer to another question, he said there was no point in asking any more questions about the Hiss case. The questions, he said, were not asked with good intent, and he didn't intend to answer them with good intent.

"Mr. President," a reporter put in, "how about a red herring question?"

That was ruled out, too, he answered in effect.

When the House Committee on Un-American Activities was conducting hearings in August, 1948, seeking to develop evidence of a Communist spy ring, Mr. Truman said at a news conference that the investigation was a "red herring."

He said that its purpose was to divert attention from failure of Congress to do what it ought to do. Congress at the time was controlled by the Republicans.

Quick to Criticize

Republicans in Congress was quick to jump on President Truman's brushing-aside of questions about Hiss.

Representative Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.) said the President's refusal to discuss his "red-herring" statement was "the attitude of a stubborn man who is still attempting to withhold information of an espionage plot in his branch of Government from the people and courts of the land."

"If Mr. Truman won't make any answers it's up to Congress to provide some of the answers," he said.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) who frequently has criticized Mr. Truman's attitude toward the Hiss case, said "I believe the President would have been better off today if he had followed that formula of silence at the time Hiss was first brought into the picture"

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) said he was "not surprised that the President would rather not discuss his previous all out efforts to hamstring the (House) committee which was trying to expose Communists in the State Department."

McCarthy said "if only he has learned a lesson and would now clean house in the State Department, it would be easier to forget his past mistakes in that regard."

Mr. Truman chuckled yesterday when a reporter asked if he would comment on a speech by Senator Byrd (D., Va.), who said in New York the other night that the Administration was leading the country to socialism.

That was a funny one, sure enough, the President remarked.

He was asked about talk of a possible compromise on legislation to set up a Fair Employment Practices Commission, the compromise being to settle the problem on a voluntary basis.

Mr. Truman replied that his ideas on FEPC had been clearly set out in a message to Congress, and he advised the reporter to read that message.

Asked again if he would entertain a compromise on civil rights, he made the same reply.

Mr. Truman was told of a London report that Ambassador Lewis Douglas was very ill and would have to give up his post as envoy to Britain. He said he could easily scotch that on, and went on to say that Douglas was recovering rapidly and would be back in England within 60 days.

In answer to a question about a vacancy on the National Labor Relations Board, the President said that Paul L. Styles was not the man for it.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross explained later that Mr. Truman thought the reporter was referring to a new member for the National Security Resources Board. He said that Styles is being considered for the vacancy on the National Labor Relations Board.

Styles is now a regional director for the NLRB, with headquarters in Atlanta.

'No New Pumpkin Papers,' Chambers Says

Westminster, Md., Jan. 27 (AP).—"There are no new pumpkin papers," declared Whittaker Chambers today.

The former Communist courier, commenting on new documents Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) said he got from him, stated in an interview:

"It's an old story. I have no more papers. The Government has all I had and knows all that I know."

Chambers saw "nothing new" in Nixon's speech to the House yesterday when the Congressman produced documents Chambers claims were given him by the late Harry Dexter White. The former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury died in 1948 shortly after denying he ever gave any confidential data to Chambers.

He said the papers were part of the evidence at the trial of Alger Hiss, convicted last week of perjury.

Of his own personal future, Chambers said he planned to go on farming his 313 acres. He has a dairy herd of 15 cows and ships 50 gallons of milk daily to Baltimore.

"I can't imagine myself on a magazine again," the former editor of Time said.

Compromise FEPC Rejected

question. A reporter asked whether he might be willing to go for some sort of compromise on a voluntary fair employment practices bill.

Mr. Truman said his ideas on civil rights are clearly set out in his message to Congress dealing with the subject. He said his compromise is in that message.

Representative Powell's letter, asking GOP signatures on his FEPC petition, followed a Powell-Roosevelt split over procedure on the House floor early this week. Powell termed Roosevelt's petition "ill-timed" and introduced another. He implied Roosevelt was using FEPC to further his gubernatorial ambitions. He said Republicans wouldn't sign up with Roosevelt for that reason.

Roosevelt offered to withdraw his petition if Powell could get Republicans to sign a second one. Powell offered to try and promptly addressed a letter to Republican members.

Taking the floor of the House yesterday, Shafer said Powell wrote Republicans as follews:

"My dear Colleague:

"I have filed Discharge Petition No. 21. On Wednesday, January 25, 1950 at 12 o'clock noon or as soon thereafter as possible I will read on the floor the names of those Republicans who indicate that they will or will not sign Discharge Petition No. 21 to discharge my FEPC bill, H. R. 4453.

"Failure to reply to this letter will indicate that you are opposed to FEPC. I will so note on the floor next week. Therefore, kindly reply before 11 a. m. Wednesday, February 2, 1950.

"You may use the enclosed postcard or call my office."

Shafer said he had "given some thought" to signing the petition but Powell's "high and mighty attitude" changed his mind.

Representative Noah M. Mason (R., Ill.) interrupted Shafer to say: "My answer to him (Powell) was 'No' and I signed my name to it."

Representative Roy O. Woodruff (R., Mich.) told newsmen: "I feel practically the same as Mr. Shafer and I think that will be the reaction of nearly all Republicans. My copy of the letter went into the wastebasket."

Representative Gerald R. Ford, jr., (R., Mich.), one of the 64 Republicans who voted for the Democratic 21-day discharge rule in the House last week, said he wrote Powell that "Any inclination or desire that I may have had to sign Discharge Petition No. 21 has now changed. I do not believe in pressure or bullying tactics, direct or indirect, from any individual or from any group. In my estimation your letter was certainly an attempt to bludgeon members of the House."

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., (Mass.) told reporters that he is still convinced that one way or another FEPC will be brought to a House vote before the close of the session.

"And when it comes to the floor, I will vote for it," said Martin.

One Republican, who declined to be quoted, said a point of order that Powell is in violation of the rules will be made if the New York Democrat starts to list Republicans who will or will not sign his petition.

Powel was not in Washington and could not be reached for comment.

Court Asked To Invalidate Loyalty Check

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday to declare the Government's loyalty program unconstitutional.

The request was made in an appeal filed by the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, a New York City organization which has been labeled subversive by the Attorney General

The appeal said that designation has had an injurious effect on the group's activities. It said its work is to assist anti-Fascist refugees who had fought against General Franco in Spain.

The committee was among 90 organizations called subversive in 1947 by the then Attorney General, Tom C. Clark. Clark now is a member of the Supreme Court.

The committee first contested validity of the loyalty program in a complaint filed in United States District Court here. The complaint asked not only that the program be declared unconstitutional but that the Attorney General be ordered to take the committee's name off the subversive list.

The District Court dismissed the complaint. Its action was affirmed later by the United States Court of Appeals here.

The Court of Appeals said the complaint did not present a "justiciable controversy" because the Attorney General was acting for the President in a matter in which the "action" of a President is not subject to court review.

The committee's appeal to the Supreme Court asked that this decision be overturned. The appeal was filed by Attorney O. John Rogge, a former Justice Department attorney.

Rome Cabinet Approved

Rome, Jan. 27 (AP).—Italy's new cabinet, an anti-Communist coalition formed by Premier Alcide de Gasperi, was approved today by President Luigi Einaudi.

FBI Witnesses Insist They Saw Nothing Like Love While Trailing Judy and Gubitchev

New York, Jan. 27 (U.P.).—Defense lawyers hammered vainly at testimony of FBI agents today in an attempt to paint Valentin Gubitchev and Judith Coplon as nervous lovers instead of cautious conspirators.

FBI Agents Richard T. Hradsky and Richard E. Brannan refused, under spirited cross-examination, to say they saw any spooning or lovers' quarrel slaps between the Russian engineer and the former Government girl.

Abraham L. Pomerantz, Gubitchev's lawyer, asked Hradsky if he didn't see the couple stop and hold hands in upper Manhattan on January 14, a night that Hradsky was trailing them to build the Government's charge that they conspired to steal United States secrets.

"No," said Hradsky.

Pomerantz failed also to draw either agent into saying the petite woman slapped Gubitchev that night with a folded newspaper. The defense claims that was the night Gubitchev angered Miss Coplon by revealing he already had a wife.

The agents described Miss Coplon's "gesticulation" with a newspaper but refused to say she clouted the Russian with it.

Most of the afternoon was spent with defense attorneys trying to draw from Brannan the statement that the defendants aappeared to be quarreling after they left a restaurant January 14.

The Government has announced it will show the three trysts of the lovers watched by the FBI were three "overt acts" proving their conspiracy to "attempt espionage." It promised to call more agents to buttress the charge.

But the defense arguments today showed the defense will be built on the claim that Miss Coplon and Gubitchev met furtively for romantic purposes only—that they were "lunatics in love."

Pomerantz tried to establish in his cross-examination of the agents today that the FBI "tipped its hand" and let Gubitchev know he was being trailed. He thought the agents were detectives employed by his wife or his fellow-Russians, the defense claims.

Pomerantz still was cross-examining Brannan, trying to prove Gubitchev knew he was being followed and therefore acted erratically, when court was adjourned until Monday.

Miss Coplon has changed costumes daily since the trial began. Today she wore a tight henna-colored blouse and gray skirt.

The defense has said it will show the short, blond Gubitchev was "madly in love with a woman" but afraid his wife or compatriots would find out, and Miss Coplon was a frustrated woman of 27 'without a husband." This explains their meetings, according to defense arguments.

P. H. Adams Gets U. S. Steel Post

Phelps H. Adams, 47, for many years chief of the Washington bureau of the New York Sun, has been appointed to the public relations staff of the U. S. Steel Corp.

He will serve as special assistant to J. Carlisle MacDonald, assistant to the chairman of the board, starting February 20, in the corporation's New York office. The Washington bureau of the Sun was closed recently when that newspaper was purchased by the New York World-Telegram.

Adams, who lives at 4605 N. Rock Spring rd., Arlington, is a member of the National Press Club and was president of the Gridiron Club in 1948.

Lehman Hits Loyalty Test

enterprise-only concept, but right of communism's dictatorship economics.

"Certainly," Lehman said, "the Government has a right to expect and demand that persons holding what are defined as 'sensitive' positions be fully loyal to the Government, and to its philosophy and principles . . . This would certainly apply to Communists and fellow travelers.

"But it should also apply with equal strength to Fascists and to believers in racial superiority and other equally un-American concepts . . .

"My general conclusion is that persons of alien or truly un-American viewpoint have no place in representative or sensitive positions . . . But I do not believe that the brand of disloyalty should be placed upon individuals by any administrative body.

"These individuals should be discharged—yes," Lehman continued. "Or if applying for a job they should not be hired . . . But the basis of this action should be disqualification, rather than disloyalty.

"Disloyalty stands hard by treason. No such finding should be made for any individual, except after a judicial proceeding . . .

"It deeply disturbs me to think of all the shame and suffering which has been needlessly visited on hundreds and thousands of government employes over the past two years in the process of the loyalty program.

"Bookkeepers and file clerks, statisticians and messengers — without access or connection with any confidential or restricted material — have been, I have been told, exposed to great expense and suffering in being required to prove, affirmatively, their loyalty to their country," he said.

"A chance association with a suspected Communist, or a family relationship with one so suspected, or even the holding of some unorthodox view in no way connected with politics has frequently been the basis for charges against some of these individuals . . .

"I sincerely hope," he concluded, "that the entire loyalty program may be reviewed and a better system, more consistent with the American tradition, be developed and established."

Half Aga Khan Gems Left at Police Station

Marseille, Jan. 27 (U.P.).—French police cordoned off the entire city of Aix-en-Provence tonight to trap Paul Leca, the man they believe has the rest of the $710,000 in jewels stolen from the Aga Khan last August.

A package containing about half the gems was found on the steps of a Marseille police station last night after a tipster telephoned where the jewels could be found.

Gendarmes placed roadblocks around Aix, a city of 43,000, and searched all vehicles entering or leaving the city. Patrolmen roamed the streets in a search for Leca, described as the fence who received the jewels.

Unofficial estimates put the value of the recovered gems at $460,000, but jewelers estimated the worth at about $350,000. They were placed in front of the station after the Surete Nationale had rounded up 10 members of the gang.

On the package was pasted a crude note of letters cut from newspaper headlines. It said "Leca is innocert, Sennanedj has the rest."

Police said the note might be a ruse to throw them off Leca's trail. "Big Roger" Sennanedj, believed to have planned the robbery, has been reported killed with his mistress, Renee Remy, because he planned to turn informer.

His body has not been found, however.

The package contained 199 cut diamonds wrenched from their gold and platinum settings, a diamond necklace, a white emerald estimated to weigh 14 carats, eight green emeralds "as big as beans," and many smaller emeralds and sapphires. Some jeweled clips and bracelets were intact.

The Surete Nationale said experts had examined the jewels and there was no doubt they were part of the loot taken from the Aga Khan as he and the Begum left their home to visit Aly Khan and Rita Hayworth at Deauville.

Although Leca's young bride said he was getting married at the time of the robbery, French police asked authorities in Italy, Belgium and Switzerland to search for him. Leca has been missing since the day of the first arrests of members of the "Sicilian Gang."

25 Arrested In 7th St. Gaming Raid

Twenty-five persons were loaded in patrol wagons and taken to police stations yesterday afternoon after a raid by Lt. Roy Blick of the vice squad and four of his men.

Two were charged with permitting gaming in a room in the rear of a delicatessen at 1704 7th st. nw., where the raid occurred. Twenty-three others, booked on disorderly conduct charges, forfeited $5 collateral each.

Louis Lieberman, 59, of 1624 Webster st. nw., alleged proprietor and Frank Joseph Clayborne, 49, of 1617 13th st. nw., were charged with permitting gaming, and released in $50 collateral each for appearance Tuesday in Municipal Court.

Lieutenant Blick said Lieberman was in the front of the place and had no bets on him, but Clayborne was in possession of horse bet records. Blick said his men watched the place for a week following complaints, but had no warrant when they entered.

Lieberman was one of 36 indicted last April by a special gambling grand jury here, but the case against him was dismissed December 5, when a Government witness said his memory regarding bets allegedly placed in Lieberman's store had become "unclear."

Fifth 'Fix' Try Is Revealed

tempt, told a deputy marshal that "several" women had reported in the jury room that they had been threatened.

Government authorities said they believe two women received threatening telephone calls and did not reveal them in the form of notes during jury deliberations.

Meanwhile attorneys for Lewis, Acalotti and Billeci filed formal notices of appeal with the clerk of the Court of Appeals yesterday morning.

All three were in jail, Lewis sentenced to be imprisoned 10 to 30 months; Billeci, 8 to 27 months, and Acalotti, 8 to 24. Acalotti's sentence will be served concurrently with an identical sentence he received in December for threatening his former sweetheart, Bernice Franklin, while she was a witness before the special gambling grand jury which indicted the defendants and 33 others. Miss Franklin turned state's evidence 11 months ago to become the Government's key witness in United States Attorney George Morris Fay's gambling investigation.

After the verdict was reached Judge Holtzoff immediately committed Lewis and Billeci to jail and denied motions to release them on bond pending appeal. Acalotti was already in jail.

In order to get their clients out of jail, William H. Collins and Myron G. Ehrlich, asked Judge Holtzoff to sentence them immediately.

By sentencing the convicted gamblers, District Court Judge Holtzoff lost jurisdiction over them. Collins and Ehrlich now can ask the Court of Appeals to let Lewis and Billeci out on bond pending the appeal.

Conviction of the three defendants was a major victory in Fay's campaign to clean up what he described as Washington's 100-million-dollar-a-year gambling racket." It was particularly so for prosecutors William Hitz and Edward L. Carey.

They prosecuted Lewis and 13 others, arrested in the former's headquarters at 4310 46th st., Bladensburg, Md., on March 25, 1949, for conspiracy and violation of the lottery laws. The trial ended in November with a hung jury and has been set for retrial February 9.

Two jurors in the first trial said yesterday that they were not approached by any persons seeking to influence their vote.

One woman said, "We stood 10 to 2 for acquittal. We didn't need to be fixed."

$21.5 Billions Gaming Take

Boston's Arlington Street Unitarian Church.

Its vice chairmen are Financier Charles Francis Adams, Industrialist Godfrey Lowell Cabot and the Rev. Frank Jennings, secretary of the Massachusetts Council of Churches.

"Organized syndicated gambling is in the ranks of 'big business'," the report said. "Illegal gambling activities are controlled by anti-social groups, so organized as to have an apparent immunity from the law and an ever-widening field of operations . . .

"In its Nation-wide implications, large-scale illegal gambling activities are carried on by dangerous criminal elements who have adapted recognized systems of business organization and efficiency to syndicates which control, among other activities, bookmaking, slot machines and organized gambling activities in their other forms.

"A notorious criminal syndicate, through its headquarters in Chicago and agencies in various metropolitan areas, is a dominant factor in off-the-track horse race betting and has been credited with interest in sports pools activities on a Nation-wide basis.

"A widely known New York City rackets' head is the reputed head of the slot machine racket."

The committee said the public has refused to face the fact that gambling diverts large amounts of money that might be spent to better advantage and that most wagering enriches and entrenches anti-social and criminal groups.

"The corruption of police officials is a fundamental in the promotion of illicit gambling operations," the report noted. It said slot machine interests commonly allot 10 to 20 percent of their gross profits for graft and protection.

Arlington Man Cleared In Slot Machine Case

A legal technicality was all that Roland W. Baline, 27, of 4823 Lee hgwy., Arlington, needed to have charges of possession of a slot machine dropped against him yesterday.

In a trial on January 13, Baline, then a witness, had admitted possession. However, Associate Judge Harry R. Thomas pointed out in Arlington County Court that Virginia law forbids the use of testimony given by a witness in any judicial proceeding against the witness at a later date.

4. THIS MAKES IT OFFICIAL—Pvt. George Wood, a motorcycle policeman, who rode to the chase, cages Sir Reynard for the trip to the Animal Rescue League for safekeeping

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

Br'er Fox, with all his well-known cunning, led a field of several hundred District fox hunters on a merry chase through downtown Washington yesterday.

Hounded by cries of "yoiks" and "tally-ho," the sly creature—black with white-tipped tail—sprinted up and down 14th and 15th sts. for approximately an hour before he was finally brought to bay on the lawn of the Treasury Department.

The field consisted of bluecoats mounted in scout cars instead of the traditional pinkcoats on horses, but the chase was no less enthusiastic.

It was hard to tell who was more startled, the spectators who had to shake their heads twice to believe they were seeing what they were seeing, or the poor fox, who was still trembling, unclaimed, in captivity last night.

The animal was first spotted near Thomas Circle shortly after 9 a.m. From 14th and M sts. he headed toward K, then cut down through two parking lots and into the wilds of Franklin Park, sending its regular tenants—squirrels, pigeons and bench sitters—into a flurry.

Heading back up 13th st., as sportsmen joined the chase, the fox doubled back through the parking lots and over to 15th and K sts., where he tried to enter the office of American Airlines but had the door rudely slammed in his face.

From there he streaked down to the Treasury Department at 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave., where he took refuge in a 15-foot-deep window well on the 15th street side.

It remained for George W. Brown, 67, of the Animal Rescue League, to make the catch while police and spectators looked on. Manipulating a long pole, he slipped a leather noose around Br'er's neck and hauled him up to the lawn.

But the foxy fox managed to slip away for a few more sprints around the lawn, then back into the window well he disappeared. This time Brown went down on a ladder, slipped a rope around the fox's neck and carried him up.

While several spectators moaned that the poor little thing might be hurt, Brown calmly placed him in a cage and removed him to the Animal Rescue League.

A spokesman at the League said the animal will be kept there several days, and if still unclaimed will be turned over to the zoo.

Where he came from, only Bruer knew and he wasn't talking last night. General speculation is that he meandered into the business district from Rock Creek Park, where several of his buddies are supposed to be roaming around.

Rose Puts Up $5000 Reward For 3 Bandits

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—Billy Rose today offered a $5000 reward for the capture of three gun-toting bandits who robbed his home of $100,000 worth of valuables.

The loot included a $3 wedding ring that belonged to the mother of the showman-columnist's wife, former swimming champion Eleanor Holm.

"If I only get that ring back I'll be satisfied," she said.

Rose said FBI agents are investigating the case.

The robbery occurred last night while Rose and his wife were at a theater.

Mrs. Rose said she was wearing $250,000 worth of jewels the robbers otherwise might have gotten.

"I'm glad Baby had her war paint on tonight," quipped Rose.

The bandits tied up the sole occupant of the Beekman pl. house, a butler, before carting away the jewel-laden safe and other valuables. A $500,000 collection of paintings and $75,000 worth of antique silver were untouched.

Capital Store Sales Return To Plus Side

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales returned to the upside during the week ended January 21 for the first time this year.

The gain was 4 percent in the latest week, as contrasted with drops of 19 percent and 5 percent in the first two weeks of 1950. For the four weeks ended January 21, local store sales remained 5 percent under the same 1949 period.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board reported that store sales in the latest week remained at the same level as last year. The Richmond Reserve District was unchanged and other Reserve districts showed the following percentage of increase or decrease:

Boston up 6; New York unchanged; Philadelphia down 1; Cleveland down 5; Atlanta up 3; Chicago up 1; St. Louis up 8; Minneapolis up 4; Kansas City up 5; Dallas up 4 and San Francisco down 5.

Furniture sales, according to one store executive, was one of the major contributions to the improvement last week. Prolonged unseasonal mild weather was discounted as a sales factor. The recent popularity of spring coats and suits, it was said, offset the dip in winter apparel.

Bonds of the offering will mature serially from July 1, 1954, to July 1, 1983. # O'Mahoney, UAW Hit Steel Price Policy

By The Associated Press

Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) of the Senate-House Economic Committee yesterday accused leaders of the Nation's steel industry of "obstructing the development of this country."

Simultaneously, the CIO United Automobile Workers Union declared that last month's $4-a-ton boost in steel prices had struck the automobile business at the worst possible moment and "put an end to talk of further (auto) price reductions."

O'Mahoney's blast at steel industry management came on the final day of four-day public hearings called by the committee to investigate rising steel prices and their effect on the national economy.

Officials of steel companies have insisted during the hearings that prices, far from being too high, should be even higher for the health of the industry.

Lower Profit Ratio

President A. B. Homer of Bethlehem Steel yesterday contended that Bethlehem's earnings of $99,283,539 in 1949 were not "unreasonable" and were actually short of what the company needed to modernize its facilities.

He said that although Bethlehem's profits were the largest in history, the rate was down to 7.8 cents per dollar of sales compared with 8.1 cents in 1940 and 12.1 in 1929.

Senator O'Mahoney, in summing up the week's testimony, said one difficulty in breaking high steel prices has been that "the little man is caught in a squeeze."

"He doesn't dare testify against the big steel companies because he is dependent upon them for supplies," O'Mahoney said.

"Leaders of the major steel companies are operating on a defeatist policy. They don't realize the economy of the United States is expanding. They are unwilling to give opportunities to other companies. They want the whole thing themselves."

Mill in New England

At another point, O'Mahoney suggested that big steel interests may be blocking a proposed New England steel mill to serve the six-State section.

O'Mahoney made the suggestion after Dr. Alfred Neal, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston and representing the New England Council Steel Committee, said the high cost of steel used by New England industries "threatens the normal economic growth" of the area.

Body Claimed By Two Wives

Foyle, "There is the previous Mrs. Babcock."

This was a reference to Mrs. Mary Magdaline Babcock of New London, Conn., a middle-aged woman, mother of two married daughters and a son by Colonel Babcock. The first Mrs. Babcock was at the airport and watched as the body was taken off the plane and put in a military hearse.

Later she told Col. R. J. Williamson, officer in charge of the Arlington Cemetery, that she was the "wife" of Colonel Babcock and expected the flag draped over the coffin at the funeral would be given to her, an aide to Colonel Williamson reported.

The colonel said he could not decide in such an issue and expected to give the flag to the Mrs. Babcock from Berlin, the aide said.

Married in Frankfort

Last night, the Berlin Mrs. Babcock told a reporter of The Washington Post she was married to the colonel in Frankfort, Germany, in December, 1945. She met him in General Eisenhower's SHAEF headquarters when they both worked there and seven months later they were married, she said.

At that time he told her he had been divorced from the New London Mrs. Babcock, claiming she left him in 1938, and showed the magistrate who wed them "an eight page document which was accepted as proof of divorce."

They lived together, she said and Colonel Babcock's daughter, Ruth, by his first marriage, "became my best friend." She is Mrs. Ralph S. Stevens, now of Newport, R. I., wife of a Naval officer. She could not be reached by telephone last night and was presumed to be on the way to the funeral.

In 1946 Babcock and his British bride came to the United States after the colonel said he wanted to also get a divorce in Connecticut, his home State, so they could live there after returning to this country permanently.

His attorney, Morris Lubchansky, of New London, Conn. told The Post last night that he represented Colonel Babcock in all his legal actions in Connecticut. He said the divorce petition charged Mrs. Babcock with cruelty over a period of 10 years, but the decree was denied by Judge Kenneth Wynne of the New London Superior Court on December 10, 1946.

No Knowledge of Action

Lubchansky said he was "not aware of any divorce action or other legal action brought by Colonel Babcock any place else."

The attorney for the first Mrs. Babcock, John J. McGarry, also of New London, told The Post he also was unaware of any divorce obtained any place by the colonel. He said he saw a letter from Colonel Babcock, mailed on January 10, in which the colonel wrote he was neither divorced nor remarried. McGarry said he knew nothing else about the affair.

In 1947 the Berlin Mrs. Babcock told The Post she had a son, Richard, by the colonel in Germany. He is now with friends in Berlin, she said. Last year, the boy was flown here for treatment at Walter Reed Hospital for "after effects of tonsilitis," she said.

The Berlin Mrs. Babcock said last night she was "positive" the colonel had received a divorce from the New London Mrs. Babcock. She pointed to the acceptance by the Army and State department of her status in making arrangements for her to accompany the body back to the United States as proof of this.

Colonel Babcock is also survived, in addition to the two Mrs. Babcocks and the daughter, Mrs. Stevens, by a son, William T. Babcock, jr. of Boston; another daughter, Mrs. Richard N. Woodworth, jr. of New London; his mother, Mrs. Forrest Thayer of Waterford, Conn., and a half brother, Alvin J. Thayer, who lives in California.

The Army officer was a native of New Haven, Conn., and headed the New London police department from April 1, 1935, to February 24, 1941, when he went on military leave. He served in World War I as a private and in World War II, he became a public affairs officer attached to SHAEF.

When Berlin was occupied, he took charge of the American Public Safety Branch and was later elevated to deputy chief of the military government. He figured prominently since 1945 in the East-West clashes over Berlin, the last time a few days before his death. The Berlin Mrs. Babcock was with him when he died immediately after completion of a stage show.

J. J. Walsh Retires From Navy Post, Served 36 Years

Chief Warrant Photographer John J. Walsh, USN, responsible for many innovations in the filing of the millions of pictures and negatives in the Navy Archives, retired from service yesterday with a total of 36 years, seven months credited time.

Walsh

He was honored by both military and civilian Photographic Center personnel at Anacostia yesterday during ceremonies in which he was accorded all the honors and courtesies generally reserved for officers of 'flag rank.'

In one of the morning's highlights, Walsh, of 1324 Webster st. ne., a local resident for 20 years, occupied the reviewing stand with Commander L. W. Parrish, USN, commanding officer, as the pair reviewed the military personnel of the Photographic Center.

Flares Spur C-54 Search

they were not discounting the possibility the flares might be from a truck connected with the current military maneuvers in the Yukon.

The plane, bound for the States with a full passenger load after a routine training flight, never reported any trouble. It is from an Eighth Air Force squadron at Biggs Air Force Base, El Paso, Tex.

Weather Reported Bad

The weather station at Fairbanks, Alaska, reported heavy icing conditions in the Yukon today as B-17s, C-47s, a C-54 and other smaller planes joined the search.

Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters at Edmonton described weather conditions for the search as "not too good."

Elmendorf Base reported the C-54 carried survival equipment required for all planes in the Far North. The personnel on such flights are equipped with clothing for survival in extreme cold.

A Weather Bureau report showed a zero temperature early today at Snag Airport. It was reported warmer than usual for this time of year in that area.

Group Votes New Attack On Prejudice

A special, all-day conference of union and management representatives, called here yesterday by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, voted to form a permanent committee to attack prejudice in industry by the so-called "Perth Amboy Plan."

The experiment, tried at the Perth Amboy (N. J.) and other plants of the General Cable Co., calls for setting up seminars on racial problems among a "pilot" group of company employes. The plan was hailed yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel conference as a success.

The 40 union and industry leaders who attended also heard AFL President William L. Green warn that an FEPC bill, which the AFL has supported, will not "automatically end all types of prejudice in this country.

"We must face the fact," Green said, "that American industry generally has failed to demonstrate the requisite in leadership and voluntary action in keeping with the problem of job discrimination."

Francis H. Russell, director of the State Department's Office of Public Affairs, warned "although we are slowly winning the cold war in western Europe . . . the fight has been greatly hindered by the lack of that feeling of equality in the United States."

Russell said the United States has "done better in exporting trucks and grain than in exporting brotherhood."

Dr. Gordon Lovejoy, a University of Miami professor, estimated that discrimination costs the United States about 15 billion dollars a year.

Store Owner Loses $100 To Young Holdup Man

Jack J. Kaufman, proprietor of Jack's Pawnbroker Exchange, 126 G st. nw., told police that about 8 p. m. last night an 18-year-old youth with a bandage on his face entered his store and held him up. He said the robber produced a .38 caliber revolver from his waistband, demanded money. Kaufman said he gave him $100 in small bills and the robber fled.

To Repair Petersen House

The Petersen House at 516 10th st. nw., in which President Lincoln died after he was shot at the Ford Theater, will be closed for redecorating from January 30 to February 5, it was announced yesterday.

McClain, Pension Leader, May Run For Governorship

George H. McLain, leader of an old-age pension movement, told a press conference yesterday he might run for Governor of California this year if a state-wide poll now being made show he has a chance.

McLain is in Washington to urge Congress to adopt his national pension plan — $105 a month for any "needy" individual and a ban on all industrial pension programs. A "needy" person would be any individual who has no more than a house, furniture and cash or property worth $1500.

He said the California poll, financed in part by his Citizens Committe for Old Age Pensions, is being conducted by Dell Smith, former secretary to Senator Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.). He said Downey, up for reelection this year, will have his organization's support, which he estimated is worth about 500,000 votes. Downey is being opposed for the Democratic senatorial nomination by Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.).

News Dealer Gets 30 Days In Lottery Case

Camnisi (Carmen) Cusato, 44, a newsstand operator, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Alexander Holtzoff in District Court to serve 30 to 90 days in prison for operating a numbers lottery.

Cusato, before his arrest by police for the lottery violation, had never been convicted of a felony although he had been arrested on numerous occasions.

In another sentence, Leroy Parker, 38, of 25 52d st. se., was sentenced to serve two to six years for committing a perverted act on a 13-year old girl.

Vincent Brown, 20, listed on court papers at 1161 Stevens rd. se., received 16 months to four years prison for stealing a $216 government check, forging the payee's name and for transporting two stolen automobiles across State lines.

Walter Wynn, jr., 25, of 1311 13th st. nw., received 16 months to 4 years in prison, and his accomplice, Elihu Miles, 26, of 1308 Columbia rd. nw., received three to nine years, for collaborating in a street robbery where $62 was taken from a man.

250 Workers Stage Walkout

"job stoppage"—as they called it—was "spontaneous." John M. Howard, C. & P. commercial manager, however, described the walkout as a union "show of strength," a move to show the company that the CWA can pull out its members when it wishes.

Other company officials said that the move of the Western Electric workers was part of the Communication Workers' current war of nerves with the Bell Telephone System—of which Western Electric and C. & P. are a part—over a new wage contract. It was pointed out that Western Electric workers have engaged in a dozen similar quickie walkouts, lasting two hours, around the country in recent weeks.

Company officials said last night that the workers would return to their jobs Monday.

Negotiations between CWA and Western Electric over a new contract for the installation workers broke down several weeks ago. The union has been seeking a pay increase, a union shop, and a hike in the travel allowance. Local 96 is also "sore" about long-standing grievances, according to its spokesmen.

Although CWA officials here deny it, it is just possible that the Western Electric strike here is a forerunner of a CWA Nation-wide strike against the Bell System. Joseph Beirne, CWA president, recently warned the Bell System that on February 1—Wednesday—100,000 of the union's members working for Bell subsidiaries would be in legal position to strike for contract improvements. Beirne has also said that 150,000 additional Bell employes —, including C&P operators and maintenance workers here—would be in position to strike on March 1.

C. H. Johnson, general manager of C. & P., yesterday branded as "false and malicious" CWA charges that telephone employes' wages are low and working conditions unsatisfactory. Johnson said that the union's threat to strike and to "jam" the phone lines with calls are "not in keeping with the fundamental principles of collective bargaining.

The CWA, then not affiliated with CIO as now, conducted a losing seven-week strike against the Bell System in 1947.

Architects Offer Contest Plan For Freedom Fair Buildings

Plans for a proposed architectural competition for the Sesquicentennial's Freedom Fair were submitted yesterday to Sesqui officials by the American Institute of Architects.

The proposal will be put before the next Sesqui executive committee meeting, Carter T. Barron, Sesqui executive vice chairman, said.

A meeting is due to be called as soon as the chairman, Joseph C. McGarraghy, returns to Washington, probably early next week.

The proposal and time schedule for the competition were adopted yesterday at a meeting of the AIA national executive committee.

Coal Talks Resume Wednesday

force full production for a period of 80 days.

At his press conference yesterday, the President was asked what he was going to do about a report that a national emergency in coal is imminent, made to him earlier this week by Dr. James Boyd, chief of the Bureau of Mines. Mr. Truman said he had read the report carefully but that he had no comment to make.

No More Cuts in Rail Service

Meanwhile a conference of Interstate Commerce Commission officials with representatives of railroads and coal producers meeting here yesterday, decided against another reduction in coal-burning railroad passenger service. Service has already been reduced by one third on roads having a limited supply of coal. ICC Chairman J. Monroe Johnson told reporters after the meeting that the supply situation has improved a little during the past three days, and that "we believe we can live in fair safety until next week."

The Senate Labor Committee yesterday pigeonholed a GOP-sponsored resolution urging President Truman to apply the Taft-Hartley Act in the coal strike.

The vote on postponement of action, moved by Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) was carried 6-5. Six Democrats voted to pigeonhole the resolution; four Republicans voted against the maneuver, and were joined by Senator Matthew Neely (D., W. Va.), who wanted the committee to reject the resolution outright.

Snags Snagged

The conviction of Snags Lewis, Frank Billeci and Attilo Acalotti is much more than a vindication of United States Attorney Fay's antigambling campaign. It is also a victory for law and order in the community, and a rebuke to the soft-soapers who make light of the corruption stemming from toleration of organized gambling. If the jury was not already convinced of the guilt of these three gambling operators, the attempted bribery and intimidation and Judge Holtzoff's stern warning made a guilty verdict inescapable. The cases will not be closed, however, until the jury-tampering charges are run down and the perpetrators prosecuted.

It is a peculiar and significant commentary that none of these gambling sentences came about through arrests by police, although the police undoubtedly knew of the activities of Messrs. Lewis, Billeci, Acalotti & Co. Small wonder if police went about it in the manner in which they broke up a "big" dice game at an after-hours club earlier this week. There the captain of No. 1 Precinct and his assistant merely walked into the club and warned the alleged operator. The way to catch gambling operators, of course, is not through warning or tipoff, but through alert plain-clothes work and subsequent arrest. The conviction of Lewis, Billeci and Acalotti proves that organized gambling can be broken up if law-enforcement agencies will make a serious effort to do it. Is it too much to hope that Major Barrett will take the hint?

Steel Argument

Members of Congress and officials of steel companies are engaged in a wordy battle over the question of increases in steel prices. The industrialists base their claim that price advances are justified on increases in production costs and larger outlays made necessary by new pension plans. And they deny that current high profits justify absorption of these added costs.

The most significant aspect of this inquiry is not the controversy over profits and prices, but the fact that the industry is called upon to defend its pricing policies before members of Congress. Under our so-called system of free enterprise, the management of a business concern is free to set any scale of prices it chooses subject to certain qualifications. These are that it does not violate fair-practice laws, that it is not an illegal combination in restraint of trade, that it is not a public utility subject to regulation.

Nevertheless, members of the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report are demanding that witnesses make out a good case for price increases. And they are asking the kind of questions that would interest a regulatory body if the steel industry were a public utility requesting permission to increase its charges. Their attitude reflects a change in public thinking that the managerial heads of our basic industries dare not disregard in their dealings with the public. For if they set prices with a view to obtaining maximum profits, they may eventually be deprived of their present right to conduct their business as they see fit and their companies may be subjected to regulation by law of prices and profits. That far-sighted industrialists are aware of this danger is evidenced by their attempts to enlist public support for their pricing policies, and their growing reluctance to charge all the traffic will bear.

Flurry In Berlin

Withdrawal of American troops from the Reichsbahn Building in the American sector in Berlin has not ended the Western-Russian flurry in the former German capital. The Russians are making a good deal of capital out of it. They are talking exultantly about the American "retreat," and, worse they are starting another blockade to squeeze the West out of Berlin. There is "a calculated attempt," according to the three military commanders, to cut the highway supply lines of the western sectors. That would be something to thank the American commander for, Gen. Maxwell Taylor. He is one of the ablest soldiers in the American Army, as well as a man of poise; but he seems to be lacking in something that is absolutely necessary in dealings with the Russians. This is unwavering firmness.

The building at issue is located in the western sector, but has hitherto been used to house part of the staff of the Reichsbahn, or the German transport system, headquarters of which are in the east, or Russian sector. It was thus a sort of branch office. Less than a third of it was used, so General Taylor, hard up for space for municipal work, decided to take it over. To this end he ordered its evacuation. He failed to take account of the strong possibility that the Russians would insist upon retention. When they did so, he backed down and the Russians were left to crow not only all over Berlin, but throughout Germany.

It was a serious error, and General Taylor has no doubt taken it to heart. If he decides upon any step, no matter how minor it seems, he must be prepared to follow through. This imposes upon him a serious review of all his moves in the light of possible consequences. In the meantime the fresh blockade will have to be resisted as vigorously as the last was.

British Lag

At last the final step in the process of moving the Mutual Defense Assistance Act of 1949 into action has been taken. Congress passed the act on October 6, 1949, for the purpose of putting teeth into the North Atlantic Alliance of April 4, 1949. You may remember the urgency which the Administration, under the promptings of the European allies, imparted to the arms measure. It was so hurried that the bill went to Congress half-baked, and had to be completely rewritten there. All the time, the legislators got the needle from both the State Department and the Pentagon. The Chiefs of Staff went so far as to rush to Europe together, so as to find out at firsthand the condition of European defense and to help to whip that defense into collective shape, and returned with another appeal for speed. Well, Congress, showing a sense of responsibility that was truly statesmanlike, did not abate due debate or the necessary task of revision, but worked hard and continually, and voted the bill on October 6, 1949.

It might have been thought that the administrators would waste no time, and that, in fact, they had gone far to anticipate Congress. They gave the impression that in the circumstances of Atlantic insecurity they would swing into high gear. It was said that the arms would start rolling off these shores at the double-quick. Yet the succeeding history is one of lethargy lapsing sometimes into atrophy. Not till December 1, 1949, was an agreement arrived at for integrated defense, though the impression had been created that the summer dash to Europe of the Chiefs of Staff had been for that very purpose. It took till January 6 to win the approval of the defense plan from the North Atlantic Council. And not till yesterday, January 27, were the signatures available on the bilateral pacts covering arms shipments from America. Now, at long last, the scene is set, and the defense material will get off perhaps by March 1.

On inquiry we find that what has spun these negotiations out so unconscionably has been the fussing with the British. The British fussed about something called "fungible" materials, about a ceiling figure in paying the administrative expenses of the few Americans engaged on the military mission to London, whether they should have diplomatic privileges, and so on. Sometimes these minor points about the working out of this "one for all and all for one" compact struck a snag which brought the preparations to a dead stop. In the light of the pressure previously brought to bear upon Congress, such delay could be interpreted only as Neronic. The Russians probably knew nothing about the stumbling blocks. But the lack of action must have seemed to them proof of what the arms program was intended to disprove—that a defensive oneness between North America and western Europe is simply a pipedream.

The lesson is twofold. Let us hear no more about the procrastination of Congress in the field of foreign affairs which is a theme song in Britain. First, the Marshall Plan, then the North Atlantic Alliance—both have demonstrated just the opposite. Congress can work fast when needs must. The second lesson is that if the alliance is to be the deterrent and the safeguard that it proposes to be, a double duty has now been imposed upon the allies to treat the alliance as a living organization to which they must contribute all the faith and dynamism they possess. Especially is this the duty of the British. The evidence from the repeated lags in these negotiations points to the retreating confidence of the British either in unity or in collective defense.

FEPC Petition

The squabble between Representatives Adam Clayton Powell, jr., and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., over sponsorship of a discharge petition for the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill, now lodged in the Rules Committee, is as unfortunate as it is silly. If left unresolved, it may do serious damage to the chances for House action on this important civil rights measure. Wrangling of this kind among proponents of the bill is more damaging than a filibuster by opponents.

It seems plain that Mr. Roosevelt, perhaps because of legislative inexperience, was guilty of a real breach of etiquette in failing to consult Mr. Powell, author of the FEPC bill, before introducing his discharge petition. Mr. Powell, for his part, was ill-advised, we think, to impute to Mr. Roosevelt a selfish political motive. As a result of the fracas, there are now two discharge petitions in circulation, neither one of which is likely to attract the Republican support necessary to make it effective. The best solution in the circumstances, it seems to us, is for both Mr. Powell and Mr. Roosevelt to withdraw their petitions and join in support of a new petition under Republican sponsorship.

No supporter of FEPC could withhold his signature from such a petition, as he might from either of those now circulating, on the pretext of keeping out of a political fight. Cooperation along such lines would be good for Mr. Powell and for Mr. Roosevelt—and, what is more important, for action on FEPC.

Corruption In Manila

Reports that more than two billion dollars worth of American military equipment have been lost or stolen in the Philippine Islands are disturbing for two reasons. Aside from the heavy loss involved, the loose management of United States property in the Philippines—as elsewhere in the Pacific—has undoubtedly contributed to the wave of postwar corruption that has been experienced in the islands. Mismanagement of such a vast stockpile of materiel in a country that is just getting its political institutions established is inevitably a demoralizing influence. It invites corruption. If it is true that American officers and enlisted personnel have connived in fraudulent schemes to rob the taxpayers of their own country, they must bear a large share of the responsibility for the moral letdown that is being witnessed in Manila.

In his recent address at the National Press Club, Secretary Acheson declared that much of the American aid given to the Philippines "has not been used as wisely as we wish it had been used." That was a very mild reference to the corruption that is said to be undermining the government in Manila. Mr. Acheson made it perfectly plain that the United States cannot intervene to correct the mistakes of the Quirino regime. The Philippine government must make its own mistakes, he said. But he implied that the United States might be obliged to withdraw its aid if it continues to be misused. This was no idle threat, but, of course, the first step the United States should take is to clean house within its own bailiwick.

The most direct way of getting to the bottom of the scandalous loss of American property in the Philippines seems to be a congressional investigation. It is a task that the Senate Investigating Subcommitttee might well undertake. If the inquiry into alleged fraud and mismanagement on the part of American officials in the Philippines should have the indirect effect of exposing Filipino corruption also, the result might be to stiffen the back of the Manila government in dealing with its own problems. Of course, the moral letdown in the islands goes far beyond the disposition of surplus American property. The recent presidential election is said to have been tainted by wholesale fraud on both sides. That mess is the responsibility of the Filipinos themselves, but they would at least be encouraged to take a stand against the corruptionists if the United States should put its own house in order.

Electoral College

The Lodge-Gossett resolution, now before the Senate, would abolish the electoral college and confirm the right of the people to elect the President and Vice President. At present they enjoy that privilege through usage rather than constitutional right—usage that is under increasing challenge. The election of 1948 brought pointedly to the fore the right of electors to thwart the will of the people by whom they have been chosen. In nine States, moreover, the names of presidential and vice presidential candidates do not appear on the ballot. The people vote only for Charlie McCarthy's who may or may not echo their master's voice. And the State Legislatures are free to take entirely out of the hands of the people the choice of the electors who choose the President.

Now nearly everyone, we assume, agrees that these defects should be remedied. The dispute over the Lodge-Gossett resolution centers chiefly on the proposal in it to abolish the practice of giving all of each State's electoral votes to the candidate winning a majority of the popular vote in that State. Messrs. Lodge and Gossett would divide the electoral votes in the exact proportion that popular votes in each State are divided among the various candidates. What could be more reasonable? What could make the presidential contest more representative of the will of the people without at the same time sacrificing the Federal nature of our institutions?

At present these contests are in fact confined to a few large States in which the parties are almost evenly matched. They are called pivotal States. Worse, the focus of appeal is to blocs of voters in those States, generally special interest groups. Thus the President, with his unique weight of responsibility in a world in which the United States has so decisive a voice, is handicapped in his statesmanship. He is tempted to think not of the American interest but of the particular interests of pressurists. More than ever nowadays is it necessary that a presidential election shall be truly national in scope, so that the President can speak for everybody. Votes for a candidate for that august and world-significant office ought to count for as much in Alabama and Maine as in Ohio and New York. That would bring out the vote in areas where people don't vote because they know their preference will not count. We hope the Senate will agree by mobilizing the two-thirds vote necessary for passage of the Lodge-Gossett resolution, as the first move in obtaining a constitutional amendment.

Home Rule First

Opponents of home rule for the District of Columbia are using an argument which, on its face, appears to have some validity, but which is shown to be wholly specious when examined in the light of actual facts. This is the argument that the District of Columbia cannot have "real" home rule without representation in the Congress of the United States and a vote for the President.

Home rule is a necessary preliminary to national representation. Voting representation in Congress and the electoral college is restricted by the Constitution to the States. The Territories do not have it. They do, however, have elected Territorial legislatures, and their cities have elected municipal governments. Congress can give the District of Columbia this much without an amendment to the Constitution.

The Territories of Hawaii and Alaska desire statehood. They will probably get it before long because, among other considerations, they have shown their ability to govern themselves successfully. No Territory has ever been admitted to the Union as a State without first having self-government on the local level.

If the District of Columbia had home rule it could follow the example of Hawaii in its campaign for statehood. It could set up an official National Representation Commission and implement it with public funds. The duties of such a commission would be to educate the people of the United States in the desirability of allowing the District of Columbia to have voting representation in Congress and the electoral college, to persuade Congress to pass a joint resolution proposing the necessary constitutional amendment, and to influence the legislatures of the requisite number of States to ratify it.

There are cogent arguments for allowing the District of Columbia to have these privileges, even though the intent of the Constitution is that this area shall never have the sovereign powers of a State. With the extension of statehood to Hawaii and Alaska there will remain no part of the United States which does not have them, other than the District of Columbia and the island possessions.

Bomb Alternative

The most important of the old obsolescent assumptions of world politics of which the Alsops speak in their January 15 column on "The Bomb" is that it is possible to prevent war by being so much stronger than the enemy that could certainly and obviously win a war if it were to occur. This assumption is no longer even theoretically tenable. Victory in a hydrogen bomb war would be meaningless. Arms superiority becomes impossible since the world can only be destroyed or rendered permanently uninhabitable once. Of necessity, our premise now is that there must be no war and that there must be a world government able to prevent war by enforcing world law.

The first step toward world government is the passage by the Congress of HCR 64 which declares that it should be a fundamental objective of United States foreign policy to seek the development of the United Nations into a world federation open to all Nations with powers adequate to preserve peace through the enactment and enforcement of world law. Then we should make a fair proposal to Russia and the rest of the world for amending the United Nations charter to convert the United Nations into a world government. It should be insured that news of this proposal reaches the Russian people.

Traffic Sentences

I have no fault to find with modern methods of determining an automobile driver's liability and guilt in traffic fatalities today. Between yardstick measurements of skid marks plus other scientifically tested accident formulas, the guilt or innocence of the driver can be definitely established and the findings of such tests submitted to a court of justice. However, the factors used by a presiding judge for determining the severity of the jail sentence to be imposed upon a guilty driver are, in my opinion, sadly lacking in detail.

In the vast majority of cases when no previous traffic violations exist concerning the driver involved, the sentence imposed is either suspended or, if sentence must be served, is for the shortest period possible under existing law even though an official inquiry accomplished in the neighborhood surrounding the guilty driver's residence would have established, without a shadow of a doubt, that such driver usually drove an automobile in a reckless and negligent manner previous to the accident. In every case such neighborhood inquiry should be accomplished and the results of such inquiry placed at the disposal of the sentencing judge.

Negroes And The Sesqui

All events being planned in celebration of the National Capital Sesquicentennial will be open to all without regard to race, creed or color.

In particular reference to the amphitheater in Rock Creek Park about which the Rev. Stephen G. Spottswood inquires in your January 26 letters column, there will be no segregation, either in the audience or on the stage.

I am surprised that there is still a question in the Rev. Spottswood's mind regarding this policy since it was set forth at a meeting with representatives of his organization months ago.

Transit Music

Why don't all you transit riders who think you are a "captive audience in agonizing imprisonment" turn the corners of your mouths and souls up and say, "I won't let it bother me! I'll read my book, or paper, or think my thoughts, or just sit and rest, without hearing the lovely music." With a little conscious concentration this can be done.

I often smile to myself and think of the pros and cons, when halfway downtown I suddenly realize that the music is playing and I haven't heard a note. It is interesting and a good service to hear the news to and from work, but if one concentrates on his own affairs he doesn't have to hear it!

It is really amusing when these people say "until these vehicles of our public transportation system are once more fit to be used by people who have a decent regard for the personal rights of every passenger!" What about rights of the majority who want to hear the music?

Friendship For Hiss

The jury scarcely finishes hours of travail in reaching a verdict in the Hiss-Chambers case before some Congressmen rush to the press to damn anyone who dares still to call himself Mr. Hiss' friend.

The admonition to run from Mr. Hiss' troubles premises his guilt because a jury convicted him. I do not question the jury's honesty. But heretofore we Americans have held personal conscience to govern personal attitudes toward our fellow men. Now, it is implied that when a man is officially found guilty, there is no longer room for a personal conviction of innocence, or, indeed, for doubt. If it be official, it is the truth.

This new idea not only bewilders; it terrifies; for, surely, this is dangerous doctrine. God save us if it ever becomes accepted that the Government is always right! Yet I am not ready to believe that many Americans think there is no error in Government action, whether the action be by Government agency, legislative committee, court or jury.

Nor can I believe that a Christian nation has abandoned Christ. "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone." If the jury verdict be assumed correct in fact, there is no charge or indication of present espionage. If the verdict be correct, we have provided a just penalty in our laws for a bad deed long since finished. Are we to stone him, too?

But most of all I cannot believe that many men anywhere will agree with the concept of friendship expressed in the demands for the abandonment of Alger Hiss. The genius of men for friendship is well expressed in our condemnation of the "fair weather friend." A friend worthy of the name stands by to lend support in adversity. That is the heart of friendship.

It is the smallest obligation of a man to retain his own conviction of the innocence of a friend and to act accordingly—official finding to the contrary notwithstanding. Nor is the high-placed Government official exempt from that small obligation. So I shall applaud the Secretary of State in his refusal to turn his back on Mr. Hiss. Our Secretary of State must be a real man. And I do not conceive that he sells out the country in being one. He stands by the principles men live by. Yet we are told that in this he acts "not wisely."

But friendship is a matter of the heart. To retain or abandon friends according to whether one avoids or incurs unfavorable publicity is a matter of expedience, not friendship. Such expedience may be "wise" in a sense; but in plain words it is hypocrisy.

For myself, I have known Alger Hiss for some 14 years. This long have I valued his friendship highly. I value it no less today or tomorrow. To know Alger Hiss is, for me, to know his innocence—and to help him in every honorable way I can.

I regret the apparent wisdom of stating for the record that I am neither a Communist nor a member of the ilk denoting itself "former Communists."

Rudderless Children

By Malvina Lindsay

Absentee Parents

WHEN THE Senate Finance Committee was told this week that a record number of children, 1,500,000, was receiving Federal relief, the question widely asked was: What's the matter with their parents?

About one half of these children have absentee parents. Usually it is the father who is missing, occasionally the mother, sometimes both. Even this fortunate, prosperous country contributes materially to the world orphan surplus.

Illegitimate children are in bigger proportion than ever before among Uncle Sam's wards. Desertions by fathers and even by mothers (about 1 in 25) account for many other public charges. Divorces leave many other children without anchor. Then some families simply break down or go to pieces under economic and other pressures. Children are split up among relatives, eventually becoming discards, runaways or delinquents.

Much of this sort of thing could be expected with child population in the United States at 46 million—its highest mark in history. Yet the rise of children on public relief has been greater proportionately.

IS SOCIETY then disintegrating? Pessimists would shout, "Yes." Yet a world war with its physical and economic upheavals was bound to take its toll of children. And the public's more enlightened responsibility toward dependent children means that a greater proportion is receiving attention.

Since the Social Security Act was passed 15 years ago services for dependent and neglected children have been greatly expanded in most States. But those services are still far short of meeting needs, as Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, pointed out in asking the Senate Finance Committee for a larger appropriation for this work.

The immediate need is to salvage as many as possible of these rudderless children. But what can be done to prevent their further increase?

The growth of desertion, "poor man's divorce," is consigning many children to public care. A year or so ago many State Legislatures grew stern about this and passed stricter laws to catch up with deserting parents who escaped across State lines.

However these laws did not do what was hoped of them. In many cases they were complex and expensive to execute. Enforcement authorities often did not cooperate. The number of children going on relief was not cut down to any appreciable extent. It was found that responsibility could not be legislated into immature, irresponsible parents. More basic treatment was needed—above all, prevention of family breakup before it happened.

NOT ONLY social workers, but legal authorities as well, are emphasizing preventive action. This is especially marked in the new trend in legal attitudes toward divorce. Some leading judges and lawyers have recently recommended that the present jumble in divorce laws be met by placing all divorce litigation in Domestic Relations Courts. These courts would have jurisdiction over all matters relating to the child and the family. Desertions, adoptions, child support, out of wedlock births, delinquency, dependency—all these would come into such courts, which would be staffed with specialists in social and psychiatric work.

The major aim of these courts would be to preserve the family and to look out for the welfare of the child. The mental hygiene rather than the legal approach would be emphasized.

Long range plans to prevent homeless children and absentee parents go beyond Domestic Relations Courts. They include programs for employment, housing, vocational training, parent education. But the present surplus of dependent children cannot wait on these nor on more Domestic Relations Courts. One of the great immediate needs is more foster homes. Children on their own are being parked everywhere, in training schools, hospitals, even jails.

These children also need medical and health care, better chances at schooling and recreation, and more welfare services that will help start them on the right track to citizenship. Even in many families where parents are not absent, children still need the necessities of life. This country does not have the homeless packs of orphans of war-devastated countries, but it cannot be complacent about its present number of children failed by adults.

Weekless Week

Thanks to Dorothea Andrews and The Washington Post for her January 20 article "Want to Laugh All Week Or 'Vant to be Alone'"? My pleasure reactions ranged from giggles to guffaws. I am sending the clipping to a freshman nephew at Cornell, where the Ag school paper sometimes deigns to use press-excerpts (with credit, I hope) from the small world outside the big campus.

What this country needs is a good 5-cent laugh, and The Washington Post certainly gave us that. May I query, after a New York columnist, "Why not have Weekless Week?"

ADA's Success

By Marquis Childs

Stepping Stone For Democrats?

NO POLITICAL organization in many years has stirred as much dust as has Americans for Democratic Action. One proof of this is that several prominent Republicans have said that what their party needs is something like this political spark-plug.

Childs

The Republicans are assuming that ADA is merely one wing—the labor-liberal-left wing—of the Democratic Party. That is an assumption deeply disturbing to many members of ADA and some of the leaders who like to think that they are not hitched to any party but are a free force in behalf of causes and ideas.

Just now ADA is holding the annual series of Roosevelt memorial dinners in 18 cities. The announced theme of the dinners is "freedom of inquiry in a free society." But there also will be some practical politicking both in the speeches and in the conferences before and after the official meeting.

As one of the ablest and most fair-minded men in the organization put it, "We've been almost too successful in the field of practical politics." He meant, of course, that so many prominent ADAers have been elected to high office as Democrats that ADA has in State after State become indistinguishable from the Democratic machine.

This brash young organization was not always so successful. Given its initial start by a group of New Dealers out of office in the early and conservative phase of President Truman's Administration, it was described by Elmer Davis as "a Government in exile."

DURING the Democratic convention of 1948 in Philadelphia, ADA looked rather ludicrous. Conspicuous ADAers were loudly and publicly demanding that Truman be replaced by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the party's candidate. And when Eisenhower said no, they turned to Justice William O. Douglas, who had rather less chance of getting the nomination than the general.

But at that same convention Hubert Humphrey, now Senator from Minnesota and national chairman of ADA, forced the issue of civil rights to a floor fight. The Deep South walked out. Many believe, however, that this unequivocal stand held the Negro vote and that vote may have been decisive in key States.

In the '48 campaign, ADA played an important role. It was a counter to Henry Wallace's Progressive Party. Anti-Communist yet ardent in support of all of Truman's Fair Deal program, ADA appealed to the independent, left-of-center voter.

The latest victory to which ADA contributed was that of Richardson Dilworth in Philadelphia. Dilworth a member of ADA's national board and head of the Philadelphia chapter, helped to breathe new and vigorous life into the moribund Democratic organization. Last November he was elected Treasuerer, one of his allies capturing another important municipal office. Partly, of course, this was thanks to charges of corruption in the Republican organization long entrenched in Philadelphia's city hall.

NOW Dilworth would like to go on with his crusade to higher office and naturally the vehicle is the Democratic Party. But many of his followers in ADA are said to be unhappy at having ADA become merely a Democratic wheel.

A somewhat similar situation exists in Connecticut. Gov. Chester Bowles of that State is an ADA national vice chairman and at one time considered accepting the top position. But today Bowles is deep in the Democratic organization with an ambitious prospect before him.

In the argument over whether ADA is or is not a Democratic cog, ADAers on the defensive say, "Yes, but look what happens when we try to work with Republicans." They cite the example of Newbold Morris' unsuccessful campaign for Mayor in New York. Morris, A Republican, ran with the backing of the Liberal Party and ADA, both organizations denouncing Mayor O'Dwyer's Tammany connections.

But Morris received fewer votes in New York City than John Foster Dulles, who was running for the Senate as an ultraconservative, anti-me-too Republican. ADA believes that Morris' own party knifed him because of his liberal support.

As merely a wing of the Democrat Party, ADA has little bargaining power. Its position must often seem humiliating and a little absurd. No better example could be cited than the shabby business in the House over a fair employment practices law.

This civil rights proposal is a basic ADA plank. Yet the Democratic Party, seemingly with the cynical connivance of the Southern wing, is playing a stalling game. The idea is apparently to keep fair employment as a campaign issue. As an adjunct of the party, ADA can protest but that is about all it can do.

Reds Restrict Berlin Travel; City Food Cut

Berlin, Jan. 27 (U.P.).—The Russian-backed East German government restricted German travel within Greater Berlin itself tonight as the 10-day-old highway blockade began cutting into food supplies.

Germans will require a new permit to travel within Greater Berlin. The Russians took similar action during their formal blockade a year ago.

The new move appeared to be an answer to the demand yesterday by Western commandants that the Russians "immediately" lift their "baby blockade."

American officials said they would "have to wait and see" what would be the effect of the new demand. Western officials already have taken emergency measures to speed the flow of perishable foods into the city.

(The Associated Press reported that Western officials, declaring the new blockade part of a desperate bid to soften West Berlin for communism, are discussing the possibility of economic reprisals.)

Bomb Ruling Up to Truman

a successor yet to David E. Lilienthal, who plans to resign from the chairmanship of the Atomic Energy Commission on February 15.

The President conferred with Lilienthal yesterday, but the latter, emerging from the meeting, declined to talk about it, or state his position on the superbomb issue.

He did take time out, however, to tell reporters at the White House that "all" of the published "representations of my views have been inaccurate and some of them just plain absurd."

The "absurd" one, he said, was the story that he wanted to go to Russia to take up the H-bomb question with Stalin.

Lilienthal has generally been reported as being opposed, particularly on moral grounds, to jumping into a project for building H-bombs. He has been said to favor first trying to use the potentiality of making them as an instrument to bring about a positive, peaceful solution of the cold war.

If those are not his views, the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee is laboring under a misapprehension. Some of its members, at least, got that impression of his position yesterday when he and the other four members of the AEC met together with the committee.

Cautions Words by McMahon

Cofmittee Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), talking to newsmen aftar the session, used some super-cautious language about "all types of atomic weapons" and "plans for advances in the technological improvements" of such weapons to describe the topic under discussion.

What the committee and the AEC members talked about was the H-bomb.

Lilienthal left early for his White House meeting, but each of the other members was called on to declare his views on the questiyon of "to build or not to build."

Lewis L. Strauss and Gordon Dean stated their position, well known in Washington for some weeks, in favor of proceeding forthwith. They feel that any delay would mean a dangerous loss of time in relation to what they think Russia is doing to get the bomb made.

Pike and Smyth Disagree

Commissioners Sumner T. Pike and Henry D. Smyth took a different view. They thought that some bold, dramatic campaign should be launched, to make sure that no possible approach to a settlement with Russia and to international control had been left untried, before the H-bomb work should be started.

Most of the Congressional Committee members are themselves undecided, or at least confused, it was reported.

Almost all, even those most opposed to making the bomb, feel there is no alternative if Russia has the capability of making it and is doing so. And they think it has that capability and is trying to make the weapon.

They also are reported to feel that chances of getting an agreement from Russia, under which this Nation could be secure, are very slight. Yet they hesitate to plunge ahead if there are other possible alternative steps.

Advisory Unit Opposes

They have before them a unanimous report of the AEC general advisory committee, composed of some of the most famous atomic scientists in the country. It unanimously opposes the project, but the reasons stated are almost entirely based on moral considerations.

The committee, from previous testimony, has before it also the view of Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Speaking, as is appropriate for him, from a purely military point of reference, he has argued that he is bound to get the most destructive weapon he can—whether a gun that shoots farther and harder, or a bomb that devastates more completely than its predecessor.

Yesterday afternoon, speaking at the Rensselear Polytechnic Institute, at Troy, N. Y., he seemed to be publicly hinting that he favored production of the bomb.

He pointed out that the atomic bomb was one of those scientific discoveries that could be put to military use more readily than to peaceful use.

Can't Withhold Discovery

It raised the question, he indicated, of whether a scientist could withhold his discovery for fear of the use to which it might be put.

He can't, Bradley said.

"We must allow the scientist to carry his discovery to its ultimate perfection, no matter how fearsome the result may be . . .

The problem must be resolved, he said, by controlling the application of the discovery. In another phrase, he alluded pointedly to the discoveries "that might be used for war, by us or against us."

Of the growing volume of argument pro and con about the question of making the superbomb, the most surprising to issue yesterday was that of Harold C. Urey.

May Have Lost Race

The Nobel prize winner and key figure in the wartime A-bomb project said flatly that the hydrogen bomb should be developed or built. Otherwise, he said, we would be losing the armaments race "intentionally."

By some "curious prejudice" which he said he thought he understood but could not specify for security reasons, the United States Government decided not to push H-bomb development in the years following the war. So, judging from preformance to date, "we may have already lost the armaments race."

Urey has been in the van of scientists who pressed for civilian control, international control, less secrecy, etc. Most of his fellow-scientists are opposed to making the H-bomb. Accordingly, his split with them yesterday was noteworthy.

He made his argument in a radio address from New York, heard here over CBS-WTOP.

Suppose the USSR developed and achieved the bomb before we, Urey said. Then its leaders could say:

"It is true that the bomb is exceedingly dangerous . . . but the explosion of a few of these bombs will win us the world. Therefore we will build these bombs and issue ultimata to the western countries, and the millenium of communism will be with us immediately."

Wouldn't Have to Drop Them

Urey said he doubted whether any bombs, in such a circumstance, would have to be dropped. He went on:

"The atomic bomb is a very important weapon of war, but hardly decisive, as everybody has emphasized from the beginning. But I wonder if the hydrogen bomb would not be decisive, so that ultimata would be accepted and it would be unecessary to deliver the bombs. This seems to me to be the situation."

On the opposite side of the argument,

Senator Frank Graham (D., N. C.) asserted in a New York speech that this country should make a new attempt at international atomic control "along with any consideration of making the hydrogen bomb." He called for a "spiritual revolution" in human affairs, and said that "human society, with a uranium bomb in its bosom and a hydrogen bomb in its womb, cannot lag in adjustments to their potential power."

Arm-Europe Project Begun

will get American arms under the billion-dollar program approved last fall.

Brief Speech by Acheson

The agreements were signed with a ceremonial flourish in the State Department's conference room at 1778 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Secretary Acheson, in a brief speech, praised them as a "major concrete step" in building the collective strength of the treaty nations. He said American military aid would contribute to the security of the treaty signers and would help them preserve peace and freedom.

The Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, replied for all his colleagues as dean of the diplomatic corps.

"We have profited from the lessons of history," he declared. "We have refused to make again the fatal mistake of letting an agressor pick some of us off, one by one."

With the President's action and the signing of the bilateral agreements, the way is open for American arms to start moving across the Atlantic. The act of Congress provided that supplies could not move until both these steps had been taken.

Officials expect the first of the arms to be on their way by March 1. American help will include training of the Europeans in the use of American weapons. A Defense Department official said yesterday that some of this training would be provided by the American occupation forces in western Germany.

British objections to the original American draft had delayed completion of the agreements by almost two months.

With an election in the offing, the British insisted on knowing just what their moral obligations would be in helping other treaty signers, including the United States. They wanted to make doubly sure that defense would not hamper their economic recovery.

And they demanded exact limits on the amount of sterling they would have to set aside for the administrative expenses of the American aid mission in London.

The British finally agreed to set aside 53,500 pounds, or about $150,000, as the limit of such expenses until June 30. The other agreements set aside the equivalent of $525,000 in France, $300,000 in Norway, $335,000 in the three Benelux countries, $400,000 in Italy, $275,000 in The Netherlands and $175,000 in Denmark.

The missions, representing all three American defense services, will average 20 persons for each country, an informed official estimated yesterday.

All eight agreements were slightly different in form and wording, with the British the wordiest and most legalistic of the lot. But all provided essentially the same commitments and safeguards.

They pledged the recipients, to begin with, to make effective use of aid, to help the other treaty allies, and to keep their respective publics informed.

They permitted the recipient governments to use American arms outside the North Atlantic area—in the Far East, for example—but only after getting the prior consent of the United States.

The agreements also contained a promise to "facilitate" American acquisition of strategic materials for stockpiling, on terms to be agreed upon later. This closely follows the pattern of existing ECA agreements.

Price-Support Joke

By Mark Sullivan

1-Cent-A-Bag Potatoes—For Export

TWO NEW steps were taken last week in the price support of farm crops by the Department of Agriculture. Both were, like many price support operations, somewhat technical, little understood by the public. When made plain they illustrate starkly what price support is.

One step is described in detail in The Washington Post by Mr. John W. Ball, a newsman who has equipped himself with special understanding of the Government's price-support activities. The opening sentences of Mr. Ball's article, here somewhat condensed, tell the gist of the story:

"The world's biggest dealer in food commodities last week advertised potatoes for sale at 100 pounds for 1 cent.

"Similar bargains in canned meat, eggs, edible beans, peanuts, flaxseed, etc., were made public by the Commodity Credit Corp., Uncle Sam's agency for operating the Government's farm-price-support program. Prices, however, are only for export. The goods can't be bought for use in this country."

About potatoes Mr. Ball says: "Americans will still be charged several hundred times the export price. Similar potatoes retailed in Washington this week at 3¼ to 4 cents a pound. In other words, the Government is selling potatoes at 100 pounds for 1 cent that are costing American housewives from $3.50 to $4. The potatoes cost the Government about $2.10 a bag . . . The sacks in which the potatoes will be sold cost from 10 to 15 cents apiece, or 10 to 15 times as much as the Government asks for them filled with the world's best potatoes."

THERE IS the essence of the Government's price-support operations. It buys large quantities of farm crops. It does not buy them because it wants them or has use for them. The purpose of the purchases is to keep crop prices up, which is the same as to say keep up the prices which the public must pay for food, as well as some other goods. Having achieved the purpose of keeping prices up, and having for this purpose laid out an aggregate of billions of dollars of the taxpayers' money, the Government seeks ways to dispose of some of the crops it bought.

One way is the step taken last week, offer the crops for sale abroad, at prices much lower than the Government paid for them, in some cases fantastically lower. The Government does not sell to American housewives for consumption as food. That would not do at all, that would defeat the whole purpose of price support; it would cause prices of food to go down.

The loss on potatoes—from a purchase price of more than $2 a hundredweight down to a selling price of 1 cent is the largest loss on any of the commodities the Government offered for sale abroad last week. The loss on eggs, in dried form, is from a purchase price of about $1.20 a pound paid by the Government down to the present offering price of 40 cents a pound.

Another step in price support last week was an announcement by the Department of Agriculture that it needs immense quantities of additional storage space to store 450 million bushels of wheat and other small grains. The announcement asks private owners of storage warehouses if they can supply needed additional space, and at what price.

THIS illustrates one of the most fantastic aspects of price support. The Agriculture Department, in order to keep up the price of grains, has made one-year "nonrecourse" loans to farmers on their 1949 grain crops. "Nonrecourse" means that when the loan comes due, the farmer need not repay it unless he chooses; he can let the Department take the grain. The department anticipates that most farmers will do this; hence need for more storage space. Also the department has made contracts to purchase large quantities of grain from farmers directly. Finally, when the new 1950 crop begins to ripen, about June, the department will need space to take much of it over, additional to the space already occupied by last year's crops.

The additional storage space now being planned is one measure of the immensity of the Government's taking over of farm crops. Another measure is the enormous cost of price support. In addition to billions already laid out, the Agriculture Department is now asking Congress for an additional two billion dollars for purchase of the present year's crops. This at a time when Government expenditure and consequent increase of the Government debt already gives rise to apprehension.

That price support, as now operated, contains threat of Government insolvency, and of disaster to the country's economic system, is the sober judgment of many thoughtful persons. Beyond that and including that, is the stark spectacle of what price support in operation is. A department of Government, and within it thousands of employes, going daily about a business which they describe as supporting prices of farm crops—but which is equally and identically a business of causing all the people of the country to pay higher prices for food than they would otherwise need to pay.

Tito, Finns Fulfill Terms Of World Bank

The World Bank announced yesterday the way has been cleared for Yugoslavia and Finland to begin drawing cash under loans of $2,700,000 and $2,300,000, respectively.

Both countries, the bank said, have met conditions stipulated in agreements signed last October 17.

Purpose of the loans is to enable the two countries to ship more timber to Britain, France, Italy, Holland, Belgium and Denmark.

The bank's funds are to be used for buying equipment.

The stipulation in the original agreement with Yugoslavia forbade use of the funds until Marshal Tito's country arranged "timber payments agreements" with Britain, France, Italy and Holland.

These agreements require the four countries importing from Yugoslavia to pay United States dollars directly to the bank for a sufficient part of their timber receipts to insure repayment of the $2,700,000 loan in two years.

Yugoslavia has made the arrangements, the bank said, calling for Britain to pay the bank $1,700,000, France $200,000, and Italy and Holland $400,000 each.

Finland was not actually required to make corresponding timber payments agreements due to certain clauses in outstanding Finnish bonds which would conflict with such a requirement.

However, Finland, by understanding, voluntarily entered into similar agreements under which Britain will pay $1,400,000 to the bank, and Belgium and Denmark $450,000 each.

Barkley Medal Award Won by Philadelphian

A design by Beatrice Fenton of Philadelphia was chosen today for the gold medal to be awarded Vice President Alben Barkley for distinguished public service.

The choice was made by President Truman and three other "jurors," Justice Vinson, House Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) and Senator Lucas of Illinois, Democratic leader of the Senate.

Congress appropriated $2500 for the medal, which will be struck by the United States Mint.

$53,694 Contract For Police Radio Work Awarded

A $53,694 contract to effect a partial changeover in Metropolitan Police radio equipment from AM to FM was awarded yesterday to Motorola, Inc., of Chicago.

It calls for installation of new sets in 105 scout cars and for two main station transmitters and receivers. An $80,000 item is included in the 1951 police budget to complete the change.

The District purchasing department asked approval of the Commissioners for the contract award, although it was not necessary, because the specifications had been criticized by one bidder as too restrictive.

USO to Close Its YMCA Club Next Wednesday

The USO Club at the YMCA, which has served close to two million men and women in its eight years existence, will cease operations next Wednesday.

Announcement of the closing was made yesterday by Fred C. Lasch, executive secretary, who said it is due to a recent order from the National USO executive committee to deactivate all USO clubs.

The YMCA club at 1736 G st. nw., where more than 100 volunteers have been donating their time, was one of the largest USO clubs in Washington.

Four young people from the Washington Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will soon begin foreign mission work, J. Willard Marriott, president of the stake, has announced.

The group will receive a two-week instruction course in Salt Lake City before leaving the country for posts in Europe and South America. As a part of their service to the church, young Mormons are requested by their bishops to give up to 36 months of mission work at their own expense.

Eleven young people from the Washington stake (comparable to a diocese) are now in the mission field, Marriott said.

Members of the group are: Edna Joy Ivie, 21, 1137 North Utah st., Arlington, former student at Brigham Young University, who will go to France; Sidney L. Sperry, 27, former Hot Shoppe employe, who will go to Finland; Lloyd Burnett, 23, former Justice Department employe, who will go to Uruguay, and Rulon Smithson, 22, former State Department employe, who will go to France. # Rector to Leave Post to Study Architecture

The Rev. Darby W. Betts, under whose leadership one of the first Episcopal churches in contemporary style was erected, will leave his parish early this summer to study architecture.

Mr. Betts

Mr. Betts, who has been rector of the Episcopal Church of St. Clement, Seminary rd., Alexandria, since it was founded in 1943, will take a six-year course leading to a bachelor of architecture degree at Columbia University.

At the same time he will be a lecturer in religion at the university and will serve as an assistant chaplain.

Last summer the St. Clement rector was named to a Commission on Architecture and the Allied Arts by the General Convention of the Episcopal Church. The commission, composed of bishops, priests and architects, will study the application of theology to the arts of church building, music and art.

Mr. Betts became interested in church architecture through his work on St. Clement's. The church, now completed, is a radical departure from traditional church architecture. It was one of two Episcopal churches exhibited at the triennial general convention last summer.

The altar of the church is in the center of the building, with the pews so placed that the congregation faces one another. Over the altar hangs an empty cross, symbol of sacrifice.

Windows have been eliminated, starlike points of light in the blue star-like points of light in the blue ceiling. The building is completely air-conditioned.

Mr. Betts attended the Virginia Military Institute, Washington and Lee, and received his Bachelor of Theology from the Virginia Theological Seminary. He expects to receive his master's degree from the seminary in June.

Silver Spring Site Of St. Paul's Church

St. Paul's Methodist Church, once in an area where it was in virtual competition with five other Methodist churches, has moved to serve a rapidly growing area.

Until October, the church was at 4704 13th st. nw. Services are now held in a recently completed building at East-West hwy. and Grubb rd., Silver Spring.

Plans for the new location of the church were made by the Rev. William E. Firth, the pastor, in cooperation with the Washington Federation of Churches and officials of the Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Church.

St. Paul's found itself in an area which was already well-churched after the unification of the Methodist Church in 1939. Churches which had once been separate denominations, Methodist Episcopal South, Methodist Episcopal North, and Methodist Protestant, all became a part of the same denomination.

When the plan to move the church was submitted to the congregation, it voted unanimously in favor of the action, in spite of the fact that many of the older people would not be able to attend services in the new location.

Nearly 75 percent of the active membership, however, has moved with the church. Others have transferred membership to other churches serving the area where the church was formerly located.

Land on which the $70,000 church was erected was given by Sam Eig, real estate man who developed nearby Rock Creek Gardens and who also donated land for a Roman Catholic church and a Jewish community center in the area.

The old church on 13th st. is for sale. Funds raised from its sale will be used to pay for the new building and for an educational unit to be erected in the future.

Formal opening for the new St. Paul's is set for March 26, although services have been held there for several months.

Adventist Leader Tells World Youth To Be Religious

Lucas

Youth of the world were advised last night to return to religion, where they can develop their lives to be a "mighty force" in the history of mankind.

The advice came from Elder Theodore E. Lucas, world youth leader of the Adventist denomination. He addressed a gathering of Adventist youth at the opening session of a city-wide youth congress at the Sligo Seventh-day Adventist Church, Flower and Carroll aves., Takoma Park.

He urged world youth to forsake by every conceivable way their human tendencies to lower their morals and to return to religion.

Elder Oliver S. Hershberger, youth leader of the Columbian Union Conference, will speak at the concluding session today.

Presbyterians Reviewing Divorce Code

Philadelphia, Jan. 27 (AP).—A sweeping review of its code on marriage, divorce and remarriage is being undertaken by the Presbyterian Church in the USA, it was disclosed today.

To that end, Dr. Clifford E. Barbour of Knoxville, Tenn., moderator of the church's General Assembly, has appointed a commission to seek clarification of rules and standards applicable to the often controversial subjects.

Made up chiefly of clerical leaders, the commission includes one lay member so far—United States Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.) and May have Wilbur M. Brucker, former Michigan governor, as an adviser. One other Pennsylvanian—Dr. Lockhart Amerman of Sewickley—was appointed to the panel.

The commission came into being largely because of the widespread discussion in the church since the marriage in 1948 of sportsman Bob Topping and screen actress Lana Turner. The Rev. Stewart P. MacLennan of Beverly Hills, Calif., was censured by the Los Angeles Presbytery for performing the ceremony.

The rules of the church provide that one of its ministers may remarry an "innocent" person to whom a divorce has been granted on scriptural grounds, one year after a divorce has been granted.

Church leaders said the commission will try to give more exact meaning to terms such as "innocent party," "scriptural grounds" and "satisfactory evidence of the facts" in divorce cases. It will also tackle the long-time question of marriages with members of the Catholic Church.

The commission will meet in Atlantic City, N. J., April 11 and 12 and prepare a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its meeting in Cincinnati May 18-24.

Bill Would Give D. C. Doctors Reciprocity in Virginia Cases

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Jan. 27.—Both houses of the General Assembly today received bills to permit District of Columbia doctors to treat patients in Virginia on payment of a $1 license fee.

Duplicate measures were offered by State Senator Charles R. Fenwick and Delegate J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm, of Arlington.

They would have State law reciprocate with that of the District, whereby Virginia doctors are permitted to treat patients in Washington on payment of the $1 fee.

They also propose "borderline reciprocity" near State lines. But they would not permit out-of-State doctors to open offices or designate places in Virginia for receiving calls or meeting patients without payment of the $50 license fee now required by law.

Both bills are expected to pass the General Assembly with ease, since they have the unofficial sanction of the State Board of Medical Examiners and of the two doctor-members of the Senate.

While several other measures affecting the nearby Washington area were introduced today, the House of Delegates passed and sent to the Senate three Damm-Magruder bills. They would: (1) Establish a trial board for the Arlington Fire Department, (2) Permit the County Board to meet elsewhere than in the courthouse and (3) Permit Arlington to stagger payments on bond issues to prevent unduly heavy expenditures in any one year.

The House Committee on Federal Relations reported a bill to allow Fairfax, Falls Church and Alexandria residents to hold elective or appointive office although employed by the Federal Government.

The bill, sponsored by Delegates Edwin Lynch, of Fairfax, and Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria, would extend to their area privileges, now enjoyed by Federal employes in Arlington County.

Exemptions under State and Federal law permit civil service workers living in Arlington to run for local office on nonpartisan tickets.

Lynch said enactment of the bill would also prevent removal from public office of Federal employes appointed or elected under another exemption, which will expire when the war "emergency" is officially ended.

Boothe proposed in the House that the substitute justice of the Alexandria Police and Civil Justice Court serve as ex-officio substitute judge of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court. The full-time Police Court justice now serves as the substitute in Juvenile Court.

He also introduced a bill of State-wide significance. It asks for a $25 revenue license tax on civil mining, electrical or mechanical engineers practicing in Virginia. If their income for such practice is less than $500 a year, the fee would be $10. No other State revenue license for engineers would be required.

Magruder proposed a change in the method of naming school boards in all counties except those with "special" forms of government, such as Arlington and Henrico, which have variations of the county manager form.

Magruder's bill would have boards of supervisors elect county school boards. There are three plans for their composition: (1) with three members, having terms of two, three and four years each, (2) with four members, having terms of one, two, three and four years each, and (3) with more than four members, having terms of one, two, three and four years each, plus "the longest term possible not exceeding four years" for each additional member.

The proposal would abolish the present system of school trustee electroal boards, appointed by circuit judges and which, in turn, appoint school boards.

Conference Hits 'Caste' In Churches

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 27 (AP).—The National Home Missions Congress today called "class and caste" the "most serious and alarming symptom of secularism."

The statement was in a report of the Findings Committee, adopted virtually without change by the Congress itself.

Noting church colleges that have grown secularistic the committee said:

"Class and caste, the whole disintegrated struggle of our secular society, are set up where they have no right to be, in the Temple of God."

"The interracial church is a symbol merely unless the neighborhood is interracial," the report continued. "Where the neighborhood consists of a variety of groups, the church's membership should represent them."

The church "must learn to think functionally instead of institutionally . . . to permeate society with a Christian spirit rather than in terms of the maintenance of particular institutions," the report added.

The Congress made only one major change in the committee's findings: The proposed report said, "We recommend to the Congress of the U. S. A. the speedy adoption of the Fair Employment Practices Commission Act now pending in the House of Representatives."

The Congress changed it to read, "We commend the Fair Employment Practices Commission Act to all citizens for study and ask that they give to their Congressman their viewpoints."

2 School Aid Bills Offered In Virginia

Richmond, Va., Jan. 27 (AP). — Two bills designed to make available $5,750,000 for loans from the literary fund for school construction were introduced today in the Virginia House of Delegates.

Both were sponsored by Delegate Robert Whitehead, of Nelson County. One would transfer stock of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad into the sinking fund and then shift $3,750,000 from the sinking fund to the literary fund. The other measure would transfer to the literary fund $2,000,000 of a surplus said to exist in the sinking fund.

School Bill Taken Up

The Administration's major school aid bill — a proposal to give $45,000,000 to the localities for school construction without requiring matching money — was taken up briefly today by the Senate Finance Committee.

Amendments were presented the committee by Senator Garland Gray, of Waverly, which would require localities to match state funds on a 50-50 basis. Gray's amendments would carry out recommendations of the State Tax Study Commission which made a report last month in which it dealt with school construction problems.

Gray, who was chairman of the commission and also is a member of the finance committee, explained that he was advocating the dollar for dollar matching provision for the 90 percent of the $45,000,000 which would be given the localities unconditionally under the Administration bill.

Bill On Reassessments

A bill to carry out a Gray tax commission proposal for a reassessment of county real estate for tax purposes every four years went into the Senate hopper today. The bill, sponsored by Senator Gray, provides for the first of the quadrennial reassessments in counties of 22,000 or more persons to be made in 1951.

In counties whose population is between 16,000 and 22,000 the reassessments would be made in 1052; counties between 7000 and 16,000 in 1953 and 7000 or under in 1954.

However, reassessments would not be made in any of the counties which have made them recently until four years have elapsed. The bill, which has Senators Lloyd C. Bird and Norris as co-patrons, calls for appropriation of an estimated $433,000 for the biennium to carry out the work.

During the year 279,104 persons visited the cathedral to attend services or to tour the vast unfinished building, he said. The largest crowd of the year was on Easter Sunday, when 4595 were present for services and 3000 tourists visited the structure.

Central's Rally Beats Out Coolidge

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Coolidge got off to an early lead but couldn't hold it yesterday and dropped a 56-46 game to Central at the Roosevelt gym.

The Colts held a 32-22 half-time advantage with Jimmy Barrett hitting for 15 of his 17 points to pace the Coolidge drive.

Carl Hevener sank a foul shot and Kenny Luxenberg scored on a fast break as the third period opened to give the Colts a 35-22 lead, the largest they ever enjoyed.

At this point, the Vikings came to life and scored 16 points before Coolidge could score again, filtering through the Coolidge zone at will.

Jack Stringer hit for three foul goals and Lou Glickfield for a field goal and three fouls to lead the surge, but it was Franny Gleason's tap, after five minutes of play, that put the Vikings ahead to stay, 36-35.

Palmer 2d, Snead Tied For Fifth

By Jack Stevenson

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 27 (AP).—Jimmy Demaret gained a finer hold on his lead in the $10,000 Ben Hogan open golf tournament by slicing four strokes off par today for a 36-hole score of 131 while the man for whom the event was named fell back.

Demaret, the defending champ, kept hitting them out of the traps up close to the holes to put a four-under-par 67 with his record-tying 64 of yesterday.

That 131 was two strokes better than Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., who finished with 133.

Johnny had a pair of three-putt greens which kept him from tieing Demaret, the colorful pro from Ojai, Calif., who played today in red pants, a two-toned blue shirt and red, white and blue shoes.

Hogan had rough going and finished with a 73. His total of 138 put him down the list.

Asked if he had any special trouble. Ben frowned, "just a little all over."

Hogan didn't have his usual steadiness today and couldn't match the putting game that gave him his 65 yesterday. Several times the short ones just wouldn't drop.

Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who was golfer of the year in 1949, shot a 69 today which gave him a 135 and a tie for fifth place.

Ed Furgol, Royal Oak, Mich., was all alone in third place with a 134. He had a 65 today, beaten only by the competitive course record-tying 64 turned in by Doug Ford. Ford has a 36-hole mark of 137.

Jack Hardin of El Paso, Tex., who has been playing plenty of sub-par golf the past weeks, continued his assault when he hit a three-under par 68 to end in a tie with Snead.

Again Demaret said his game out of the traps kept his score down. In the 36 holes he'd been trapped eight times and on every occasion hit out close to the pin.

"It was putting fine," said Demaret, who prior to the start of the Phoenix tournament quipped he hadn't sunk a putt in a year."

"What did you do on No. 13," a fellow pro asked Demaret, who yesterday sank his first hole-in-one of a long competitive career on that "lucky" hole.

"You know," laughed Demaret, "I hit one just as well, only today it went in the trap."

GW, Hoyas Clash Tonight At Armory

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

George Washington and Georgetown clash tonight at the National Guard Armory and the Colonials can claim the championship of the Washington area by winning.

The big game starts at 9:15, right after completion of the 7:30 freshman preliminary.

G. W. holds a 21-point victory over Maryland, which beat Georgetown by 5. The Terps don't play either of the two city schools again, so the title depends on the outcome of the G. W.-Georgetown two-game series.

The Colonials need only to split with the Hoyas to claim the title, while Georgetown must beat G. W. twice. The two teams meet again February 15.

The Hoyas, with a 6-5 record against strong opposition, will have a slight height advantage over the Colonials, who've won seven and lost five against a comparatively weak list of opponents.

Six-foot six-inch John Mazziotta, who plays center for Georgetown, outreaches Ace Adler, G. W.'s tallest player by two inches.

The Colonials, however, boast the leading scorer of the two teams in six-foot two-inch Johnny Moffatt, former McKinley High star, with 160 points.

In six-footer Tommy O'Keefe, Georgetown probably has the best all-around player of the area.

O'Keefe has made 47.6 percent of

Branca Gets His $14,500 and A Bonus Clause

Brooklyn, Jan. 27 (AP).—Ralph Branca, 24-year-old right handed pitcher who compiled a 13 won-5 lost record last year, signed his 1950 Brooklyn Dodger contract today. Branca received $14,500 last year and reportedly signed for $16,000 for 1950.

Although no actual terms were announced, it was gathered from remarks made by Branca and Brooklyn Boss Branch Rickey that the big righthander would work on a bonus arrangement.

Asked whether Branca had received a boost in his '49 salary of $14,500, Rickey at first answered "definitely yes." In his next breath, however, he qualified it by saying:

"I'm sorry I said that. I should have said I can't discuss the amount."

Branca is believed to have signed for the same figure he received last year, with a designated sum of money for each additional game he wins after 15.

Asked whether such was the case, Branca smiled and said:

"Well, you heard Mr. Rickey. I'd rather let him do all the talking."

Dud De Groot Will Coach at New Mexico

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 27 (U.P.). Dudley S. DeGroot, West Virginia University football coach for the past two seasons, tonight announced his appointment as grid mentor at the University of New Mexico.

The former Washington Redskins and Los Angeles professional coach said he was informed of his selection by New Mexico president, Tom Popejoy, in a telephone call from Albuquerque.

DeGroot succeeds Berl Huffman who was elevated to athletic director at the end of the past season. The University of New Mexico, with an enrollment of about 5000 is located at Albuquerque.

West Virginia University President Virgil Stewart said DeGroot had kept him informed of his talks with New Mexico officials

DeGroot's first Mountaineer eleven in 1948 compiled an 8-3 regular season record and went on to defeat Texas Mines 21-12 in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Tex. However, the Mountaineers had a disappointing campaign last fall, winning only four games while dropping six and tying one.

The Associated Press reported DeGroot as saying:

"I count it a great opportunity to become associated with the University of New Mexico, which is an up and coming institution as far as I can see and obviously in the fastest growing city in the United States."

Milligan Quits As Pitt Coach

Pittsburgh, Jan. 27 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh's ever-bubbling football kettle boiled over again today as head football Coach Mike Milligan turned down a year-to-year contract.

"I don't like a one-year contract," was the taciturn Mike's only explanation. He added that he had no plans for the future and also no offers from other colleges.

Pitt issued a brief statement saying Milligan had been offered a contract on a year-to-year basis and formally refused it.

No 'Front Office Pressure'

New Tribe Boss Promises Boudreau Full Support

Cleveland, Jan. 27 (AP).—Hey, Lou Boudreau. Your new boss, Ellis Ryan, says you can quit worrying about front office "pressure" this season while you're trying to run the Cleveland Indians.

Ryan, who took over as president of the baseball club late last year from Bill Veeck, told a Kiwanis meeting:

"I think you'll see a different man in Lou Boudreau. He was under pressure. It's a published fact that Veeck had no great love for him as a manager.

"We're going to give Lou our full support and we're surrounding him with the coaching staff he wants. Also we want to let the players know we're behind them too. We want to erase the lines between the office and the field."

Other quotes from the new owner:

On pennant chances—"We're no worse right now than we were at the close of last season, when we finished third. How are we going to improve ourselves? Money didn't do it for Tom Yawkey (owner of the Red Sox) in Boston.

On the amount of pay it takes to run a ball club—"When Bill Veeck sold me the club he said I would be able to cut players' salaries by at least $150,000. I found this impossible. In fact, our salary total will be higher than Veeck's. I've learned that when a player has a bad year he doesn't expect to be cut. And when he has a good year he wants a raise. I can't say I blame them."

Marlene Bauer Wins, 1 Up, to Gain Semifinal

Miami, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP)—Medalist Marlene Bauer fought her way into the semifinals of the eighteenth annual Helen Lee Doherty women's amateur golf tournament today as she came from behind to beat Marjorie Lindsay of Decatur, Ill., one up.

The pretty 15-year-old Midland, Tex., sensation was trailing one down on the sixteenth hole.

The surprise upset of the day was Edean Anderson's 3 and 2 victory over Jean Hopkins of Cleveland, Ohio. Miss Anderson, a 19-year-old brunette from Helena, Mont., is playing in the Doherty tournament for the first time.

Polly Riley, winner of the Tampa Women's Open Golf Tournament last week, moved into the semifinals with her 3 and 2 victory over Mrs. Catherine Fox Park of Bloomfield, N. J. Miss Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., carded a sizzling one over men's par 37 on the front nine.

Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, turned in her best round of the tournament as she eliminated Miami's only representative left in the championship flight, Mrs. James D. Platt, jr. Miss Kirk, who fired a one under women's par 37 on the front nine, ended the match 3 and 2 after turning with a four up lead.

Marlene and Miss Kirk are matched in the semifinals tomorrow and Miss Anderson and Miss Riley compete for the finals berth.

Charles Signs For Title Defense

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—Ezzard Charles, the NBA heavyweight champion who is not recognized as titleholder in this State, will risk his crown in Buffalo, February 28, against Freddie Beshore of Harrisburg, Pa.

The two will clash in a 15-rounder that cannot be billed as a championship fight.

NBA Bombers On the Block

St. Louis, Jan. 27 (AP).—Want to buy a professional basketball team? If so, come to St. Louis and see the owners of the Bombers of the National Basketball Association.

They're unhappy about the poor showing of the team and dwindling attendance, which has averaged about 3550 for home games this season.

Coach Grady Lewis says he is not at all pleased with the condition of some of his players. The Globe-Democrat reported rumors of dissension among the players and speculated that some of them may be fined for such things as drinking and keeping late hours.

Emory Jones, general manager of the Bombers, occupants of the celler in the association's Central division, said today anyone wanting to buy the Bomber franchise would get a warm welcome.

You Can't Kill an Umpire Over Television

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

SOME day, what with atomic energy and such, inventive minds probably will arrange for intercommunication between television sets and the source of programs.

Haight

In other words, if Pop wants to yell, "Kill the umpire," his voice from the living room will mesh with the anvil chorus at the ball game. If brother doesn't like the viciousness of a tackle he can chant "dirty player" and be heard on the sidelines.

This would not only apply to sports shows, but mother could join in the applause for a concert artist and sister's laughter could be heard along with the Milton Berle audience.

However, that day probably is in the distant future. Something has to be done—and quickly.

Video watchers are going nuts following boxing, wrestling and the like.

They build up emotions to fever pitch. Hearts pound, arteries harden, ulcers boil—the whole thing adds up to a new disease called "televisionitis."

They rave and rant about the referee or umpire; work themselves up into a lather over some angle, and where there's heap big smoke there must be some way of putting out the fire.

Of course, a roused guy can throw a shoe through the screen or cuss out the family or stomp off to bed—and don't think for a minute this isn't being done.

A friend confessed that the first bad words ever uttered in his house were the result of what looked like a rotten decision in a night ball game.

And this sort of thing isn't confined to male sports fans. The women, too, are working themselves into frenzies.

I have some first-hand information, too.

Perhaps you were watching your set the night that Wrestler Laverne Baxter tricked Natie Brown into defeat. Brown apparently believed Baxter's pats on the back were those of the referee and when he loosened his grip, Baxter pinned him.

After the match, I wrote my story in Turner's Arena office. The phones were ringing like mad.

I answered a call. The voice seemed that of an elderly matron who said, "Mr. Brown definitely was the winner. We were sitting here in the living room and saw every move. The referee distinctly had counted out that terible Baxter—"

I picked up another phone. "Could you tell me what television company sponsors the wrestling matches?" asked a determined female.

Supplied with the information, she snapped, "I thought so, I'm taking mine back tomorrow," punctuating that statement by slamming down the receiver.

After my ear regained normalcy, I took a few other samples—several unprintable.

I gave up when I contacted a fellow who must have been strictly tavern talent. He slobbered, "I'm coming down there and blow up your darned joint, see."

Perhaps the situation could be solved by the invention of a small mechanical man to be placed on the top of the television. He could be so wired that he would react to any mood of the watcher.

Let's call him Sammy.

If you disagreed with a boxing decision and booed, Sammy would join you in giving the judges the raspberry. He would agree with you on any kind of a beef.

Sammy would allow you to put off steam and console you during the cool-off period.

On second thought, it might be for the best if Sammy is not invented.

Suppose a fellow came home slightly slushie and his wife asked, "Where have you been?" and he replied, "I was sitting up with a sick friend."

And just suppose, at this point, Sammy laughed.

Preakness Cut to $50,000

70 Horses Eligible for May 20 Race

Baltimore, Jan. 27 (AP).—Some of the glitter—$25,000 worth—has been removed from the Pimlico Preakness, part of the mythical triple crown for racing's three-year-olds.

The Maryland Jockey Club announced today it will contribute $50,000 to the purse for the seventy-fourth running of the event May 20. The move marked the second straight year the club has slashed the pot by $25,000.

With the Kentucky Derby still worth $100,000 and the Belmont Stakes good for $75,000, the Preakness thus became the "cheapest" of the turf's three big races for sophomore thoroughbreds.

All three are made richer by starting fees and supplementary nominations. The current value of the Preakness is $65,115, which may grow to about $80,000 by the time the mile-and-three-sixteenths race comes off.

The club announced 70 runners, including two fillies, are eligible, with Calumet Farm and Brookmeade Stable each represented by six.

Bill Bennings Says:

Dear Folks:

The Preakness has been cut to $50,000 which shouldn't be the cause for any tears. Races like the Derby, Belmont and Preakness don't need big money to draw horses. These are not poor man races to begin with and those with the dough to get the best stock will shoot for the top stakes regardless of the cash involved. The Triple Crown will still be the Triple Crown if the three races were only for $25,000. Santa Anita has tossed in $100,000 races with a lot of zest, but their events, while interesting winter fixtures, haven't set the world on fire. By the way, I heartily agree with Ev (Daily News) Gardner in refusing to cry because Citation gave away weight and was beaten. Calumet has been singing the weight blues for too many years.—Bill

Terps, Hoyas Run Tonight In Garden

New York, Jan. 27.—Ten men from Georgetown and four from Maryland will try their luck in the Millrose Games tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden.

Jim Fielding, 18-year-old Hoya freshman sprinter, is the likeliest of the Washingtonians to grab a first place.

He's entered in the 60-yard dash against such opponents as New York U.'s Irv Kaplan, Illinois' Bill Mathis, Iowa's Marcellus Boston, Seton Hall's Andy Stanfield and Rhode island's Bill Dwyer.

In his last four races against these men, Jim has finished first once, second two times and third once.

Big Billy Mitchel is Georgetown's representative in the 60-yard hurdles. He has two third places to his credit this season. His top competition tomorrow will come from Harrison Dillard, defending meet champion, and U. C. L. A.'s Craig Dixon, who is making his first Eastern start.

Georgetown's mile relay team of Vince Cino, John Lynch, John Wongelewicz and Mort Kane will race against Army, Navy, and Pen. Maryland's mile quartet of George McGowan, Mario Salvanelli, Jim Buehler and Tyson Creamer wil go against Colgate, Boston College, Holy Cross and Rhode Island State.

his shots for 130 points, and he's a slick ball handler and defensive player.

The Georgetown player whom G. W. Coach Bill Reinhart fears most is Frank Alagia, husky 6-foot 1-inch forward. Algaria played for Reinhart at Kings Point, N. Y., Merchant Marine station, but elected to go to Georgetown instead of G. W. when he left the maritime service. Alagia's two last minute basket beat American U. for the Hoyas early in the season.

At halftime, Pauline Betz Addie, former tennis star, will play a half-time table tennis exhibition with Champion Sandor Glancz.

The freshman preliminary has also attracted a lot of interest. The Hoya frosh are unbeaten in eight games, while G. W. has an 8-1 record. The two schools are calling their yearling squads their best since before the war.

Rare Word Needed To Rate 'Intruder'

By Richard L. Coe

"GREAT" IS A WORD this column carefully avoids. Admittedly, the paucity of a reviewer's general vocabulary leads me into vouchsafing superlatives that come too easily, but "great" is a word conscientiously reserved for rare pictures.

And great is the word for "Intruder in the Dust," on the Capitol screen. Clarence Brown's direction, Ben Maddow's screen play and a superlative cast make this picture from William Faulkner's novel one you will see and remember.

What's more, anyone who can be lured into the theater will enjoy it. Enjoy? Yes, for in story-excitement, it's a humdinger. On this mystery story level it's got enough to engross fans who ask only that. This is important, for anyone who goes to see it will be impressed with its more subtle excellences as well.

It's the story of a Mississippi town's urge to lynch a Negro and how two boys and an old woman act on a hunch and prove he didn't shoot a white man in the back. The way the threads are gradually gathered up, in strong courageous hands, will keep you fascinated from beginning to end.

Now why is this?

In the first place, Director Brown has told his story essentially in terms of pictures. The dialogue is haltingly natural and there is a striking (and how welcome!) absence of background music. Yes, here is a movie in which the camera tells the story.

In the second place, the people are people. While many of the actors have had long, fine careers, they are unfamiliar enough to keep you from realizing that so and so is bound by contract to do thus and so. The rest of them are residents of Oxford, Miss., where the picture is filmed.

Ministers Would Enjoy

In the third place, there is not one drop of the goey movie-love setup, no hero and heroine telling the world they're in love, little them. Instead, this is a story of the love and understanding Christ taught, the love and respect of one human being for another. It is a sermon in celluloid.

For had he not played Good Samaritan one day to the young lad whose nagging conscience ultimately frees him from hanging, the old Negro would have hanged. The boy fell into an icy pond while hunting. The Negro gave him food, clothing and shelter. When the lad wanted to pay him, the dignified old man made it clear to the boy that he was a guest, not a superior to tip his benefactor. The boy's efforts to establish his supremacy as a white gets him nowhere—only into an awakened conscience. And when the trapped Negro asks for an attorney, the boy's soul forces him to bring his lawyer-uncle into the case.

This leads into the chase for the real murderer. In the still, suspicious night the two boys and the dogged old lady dig up the victim's grave, find it empty. And so the hunt goes on for the gun whose barrel fits the fateful bullet.

Expertly Cast

There is a stubbornly natural approach throughout the picture. Thanks to Metro's explicit care in filming the locale, Faulkner's imaginary Mississippi county has a completely credible setting in the State's Oxford. The townspeople look like townspeople and their shamed chagrin when they discover how they almost took an innocent life is a telling shot indeed.

The central performances are wholly splendid, with Claude Jarman, jr., as the center of the focus. Elisabeth Patterson, who has given us comedy as well as sadness in her many roles, is grand as the old lady and Juano Hernandez is impressively cast as the old Negro. David Brian has wisely not attempted to inflict a Southern accent on his voice, and Porter Hall is resourceful as the murdered man's father.

I don't think you can help being engrossed by "Intruder in the Dust."

Promotion Credit Bill For Veterans Voted Out of House Unit

The House Rules Committee, by one-vote margin, has okayed the veterans' promotion credit bill for full-dress debate in the House.

Its action could easily lead to giving veterans of World War II throughout Government credit toward in-grade promotions for time served in the armed forces. The bill would benefit veterans who entered Government after military service.

As now written, the bill would apply only to veterans in the postal service. However, several House members have in bills to expand it to cover all veterans in the Federal service. If approved in its expanded form, veterans would get salary boosts of from $100 to $500 a year.

LONGEVITY: On the Senate side, its Postoffice and Civil Service Committee yesterday approved the Johnston bill to give credit toward longevity promotions to all postal employes for all postal service.

Committee members said this was their intention last year when they approved the postal pay bill. The comptroller general, however, ruled otherwise.

Meantime, the Civil Service Commission has been asked to clarify its regulations on longevity raises for classified employes. A number of agencies are withholding the raises from some of their employes until the issue is settled. The commission is slated to amend its regulations soon.

FURLOUGHS: Civilian employes of the Army's National Guard Bureau have been told they must make up a $16,000 deficit in the agency's appropriation. And they must do it, it seems, by each taking five days off without pay before July 1.

Employes there have asked two pertinent questions: (1) Why the bureau doesn't go back to Congress and make a case for the $16,000, and (2) why shouldn't all employes in the bureau, civilian and military, be called on to take leave without pay?

DUAL NOTES: Representative Howell (R., N. J.) has in an important bill for Federal workers. His measure would allow Government people to be taxed only in the States in which they are domiciled.

The Howell bill, for example, would prevent Virginia and Maryland from taxing employes who live here but whose offices are in those States.

NOTES: Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) has again called for the transfer of Federal agencies out of this city as a preparedness measure. . . . At the Army Medical Center, Joseph Dagenhart, Rosalind Lane, and Todd Schaulis have been cited for their economy suggestions. . . . On Capitol Hill, Charles Alden today will celebrate his golden anniversary as a Senate employe. He worked in the offices of a dozen members and he's now employed in the custodian's office. . . . Harry W. Colmery, a member of the loyalty review board, is in the race for Senator from Kansas. . . . C. A. Cary, a chemist at Agriculture's Bureau of Dairy Industry, will retire next week after 32 years of service.

Labor Department officials are drafting an Administration bill to cover Federal workers under unemployment compensation. The President has asked repeatedly for this benefit . . . The Public Health Service is accepting application from nurses, psychologists, and bacteriologists for appointments in its regular corps . . . Zaven Nalbandian has received a commendation for "outstanding performance of duty" by Maj. Gen. A. C. McAuliffe, chief of the Army's Chemical Corps.

VA: Administrator Carl Gray made a slam-bang defense of his agency and its operations before the President's advisory committee on management improvement. His statement was an indirect answer to the Hoover Committee recommendations that its hospitals be transferred to Federal Security, and its housing program be switched to the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

The administrator said that VA has had "a natural, healthy growth from the bitter experience of divided responsibility." He quoted Herbert Hoover as saying in 1929 that veterans' problems could be handled more economically by the merger of all functions dealing with veterans in a single agency.

Traffic Takes Lives of Two More in Area

District Man, 60, Arlington Boy, 12, Killed as 1950 Toll Keeps Pace With '49

D. C. traffic deaths this year . . 5
Deaths this date last year . . . . 5
Total traffic deaths last year . . 71

Traffic accidents in the District and Arlington yesterday claimed the lives of a 60-year-old man and a 12-year-old boy.

Killed in a freak accident at Sherman ave. and Kenyon st. nw., at 8:30 a. m., was Charles Jackson, a Federal Works Agency employe, of 777 Kenyon st. nw.

Police said he was standing next to an electric light pole when it was knocked down by a Pepco truck which collided with a taxicab that was to pick up Jackson. The truck first crashed into two trees before knocking down the pole, they said. It had not yet been determined whether Jackson was killed by the pole, which fell on him, or by the truck, according to police.

The truck driver was identified as Paul J. Barrett, 18, of 5000 4th st. nw., a timekeeper for Pepco. Driver of the taxicab, police said, was Evans W. Black, 40, of 1767 Swann st. nw.

Both Men Booked

Both men were booked on a technical charge of "hold for the coroner" and will appear at a coroner's inquest in Jackson's death Monday at 11:30 a. m.

In Arlington, Fred Lehman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Lehman of 117 S. Aberdeen st., was killed instantly at 4:20 p. m. when he was struck by an auto shortly after he alighted from a school bus.

Fred

The boy a student at Thomas Jefferson Junior High School was crossing Lee blvd. at Parks dr., when the accident occurred. Police said he crossed the west-bound traffic lane and had stepped off the safety island into the eastbound lane when struck.

Driver of the car, James Walter Ford, 37, of 337 I st. sw., was charged with manslaughter and reckless driving. James A. Owens, 32, of 211 I st. ne., who was in the car with him, was booked as a material witness.

The boy was a member of Scout Troop 148 and of the young peoples group at Arlington Forest Methodist Church. His father is employed at the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The Lehmans have one other son, John, 8 years old.

Two Women Injured

Two women were injured in District traffic accidents yesterday.

Mrs. Marie E. Rodenhi, 62, of 1609 Crittendon st. ne., received a compound fracture of the left leg when she was struck by an auto at Michigan ave. and Queens Chapel tr. ne.

She was admitted to Sibley Hospital, where she was reported in good condition. Driver of the car, Franklin O. Kidwell, 60, of 5401 37th ave., Hyattsville, Md., was charged with failing to give full time and attention.

Mrs. Elsie H. Hayes, 67, of 3209 22d st. ne., was admitted to Casualty Hospital in serious condition with a compound-fractured right leg, scalp lacerations and possible fractured right wrist.

Police said she was struck by an auto at Rhode Island ave. and 22d st. ne. Driver of the car, Robert L. Cokely, 22, of 5503 Volta ave., Bladensburg, Md., was charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Inaction in Traffic Death Of Soldier Is Protested

A Fort Myer colonel yesterday protested to Arlington authorities the failure to charge the driver of an auto which killed one of his soldiers early on January 21.

Col. J. V. Cole, in a letter to County Manager A. T. Lundberg said he could not "understand how this case can judiciously be dismissed without some action. . . . If the driver had had proper control of his car Corporal (LeRoy J.) Ayers would not have been killed."

Lundberg said he would confer with Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney Denham T. Rucker. Rucker pointed out any citizen could swear out a warrant if he has proper evidence.

528 Vikings, Blond, Lean and Tall, Arrive Here on Cruise To See the Sights of Capital Including Washington Girls

Swedish Man o' War Brings Cadets Here For Short Visit

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Exactly 528 Vikings, most of them blond and many of them lean and tall, arrived in Washington yesterday, and, girls, it pains us to tell the tale that follows.

A fine sight their ship was, easing up the Anacostia and through the South Capitol st. drawbridge to dock at the Naval Gun Factory.

The cruiser Gotland thus became the first Swedish man o' war ever to visit here and the Vikings lined her rails.

But among them, 'twas soon to develop, was one who had had an experience with American women that should happen, no, never, to a fairly tall, lean and blond Viking.

It was on the fantail that the story was pried out of Ordinary Seaman Carl Leonard Johnson, age 20, who calls Stockholm and the seven seas home.

Ordinary Seaman Johnson seems no ordinary man, girls. The rugged apple-bloom of young viking-hood is on his cheeks and the colors of golden spring smite his hair.

While in the Swedish merchant marine, he related, he visited San Francisco and New York. His cup brimmed with romantic ideas about American girls.

But what—in Frisco and New York, that is—did he find?

Paint!

All his romantic ideas went tumbling.

Whenever he thinks of American women now it's a sad, oh, sad tale, with one word: Paint!

"Too much painted up, all those girls were," he recalled, leaning against a Bofors. "Much more paint than home in Sweden."

But Ordinary Seaman, no ordinary man, Johnson, is still not convinced the word is paint for all American girls. He thinks Washington girls might be the exception. He hopes to find out in his six days here.

This is a good place to say the Washington public, girls included, is invited abroad the Gotland for a visit between 1 and 4 p. m. Sunday at the gun factory, 8th and M sts. se.

THE SWEDISH CRUISER GOTLAND RIDES AT ANCHOR IN THE ANACOSTIA

When the 437-foot, 4750-ton vessel had docked yesterday, after the fanfare of 21-gun salutes, Swedish Ambassador Erik Boheman went abroad to greet Captain S. O. Rosenberg.

The captain, an extremely affable man with merry blue eyes, offered sherry to all comers. There was many a "Skoal!" and we wondered again just what Elmer Thomas could have been talking about.

The captain told how the Gotland is now on a three-month training cruise. The 528 men aboard include 68 naval cadets, who will visit Annapolis several times while here. Today the captain and the ambassador will pay a formal visit to the Academy.

The captain listed places in the order he'd like to see here as "the White House, the Capitol, and the . . . the place like a needle . . . oh, yes, the Washington Monument."

Topside and aft a breeze session was going on which showed shortly that Swedish sailors are no different from American sailors.

Someone asked if they'd like to meet American girls.

"Swedish boys like to meet girls," said one.

These Vikings!

Pritchett Gets Death Sentence In King Slaying

1st Degree Murder Conviction Calls for Execution; Jury Out Under 5 Hours

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

A District Court jury yesterday found Fred S. Pritchett, 38-year-old mechanic and former convict, guilty of first-degree murder in the slaying of Clyde L. King, 50, locomotive engineer, last July 10.

The verdict, under District law, makes the death penalty mandatory. Only the President has the power to commute the sentence. Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, trial judge, did not set a date for the formal sentencing.

The panel of eight men and four women received the case at 10:10 a. m and arrived at the verdict shortly before 3 p. m.

Pritchett's heavily lined face paled then flushed as the verdict which doomed him was read by Jury Foreman William E. Anderson, of 617 Rittenhouse st. nw.

"We find the defendant guilty as charged," announced Anderson.

"Do you mean murder in the first degree?" inquired Goldsborough.

The foreman answered affirmatively and the jury was polled at the request of defense counsel.

Pritchett, wearing a tan topcoat over his suit, walked somewhat unsteadily as he was manacled and escorted out by deputy United States marshals to be driven to District Jail.

Defense attorneys said they would file for an appeal with the United States Court of Appeals.

Under the law, the jury could have found for second-degree murder which does not carry a death penalty, manslaughter or acquittal. It was the element of premeditation that made the verdict one of first degree.

King was shot to death at the controls of his switch engine in the Eckington yards of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

During the trial, which opened last Tuesday, Prosecutor Richard Roberts presented witnesses who testified that Pritchett and King had argued violently after Pritchett brought Mrs. King home from a party.

Other Government witnesses asserted that Pritchett had vowed he'd "kill" King.

Pritchett pleaded self-defense. He testified that he went to the yards to bring some liquor to King as requested. He said King drew a pistol on him. A struggle ensued, he declared, during which King was shot.

It was brought out at the trial that Pritchett had once served 12 years of a 27-year-sentence for shooting a man to death in Virginia.

Planners Ask Bridge Study By City Heads

Interested in Spans For Mass. Avenue, Parkway, Fort Drive

The District Commissioners have been asked to study the whole problem of the need for additional bridge capacity across the Anacostia River.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday drafted a resolution making the request, and stated these as its aims:

1. To determine need for a bridge in the line of Massachusetts ave.

2. To work out a program for constructing the Baltimore-Washington bridge which would link up at M st. and Maryland ave. ne.

Asks Fort Drive Bridge Plan

3. To plan for the construction of the Fort Drive Bridge, which already has been suggested by the commission but is not included in Highway Department plans.

The NCPPC asked the Commissioners to plan for these projects or "any combination of these three methods to meet future needs."

It also stated it would "welcome the opportunity to participate in these studies."

In an earlier action, the NCPPC voted to ask the Sesquicentennial Commission for an additional $35,000 to prepare an exhibit of its work for the Sesqui celebration.

Originally Allotted $15,000

NCPPC originally was allotted $15,000 for preparing a 150-year history of the growth of Washington. Exhibits illustrating this growth are to be displayed in the southern part of the Corcoran Gallery's ground floor.

The exhibit is expected to be completed in May, and will include scale models of the city, topographic maps, and what Planning Director John Nolen, jr., called "graphic material." It will project the city's future growth in line with the comprehensive plan for the development of Washington and its environs which the commission is now preparing.

Hyattsville Policeman Dismissed From Force

Hyattsville Police Pvt. Thomas F. Bladen has been dismissed from the force, effective Thursday, for "failure to report for duty," Chief Howard H. Holmes disclosed yesterday.

Chief Holmes said Bladen had reported in sick on Wednesday and Thursday, but that an investigation disclosed that he was capable of reporting for duty at the time. He declined further details, but said a full report of the action would be submitted February 6 to the Hyattsville City Council, which would act as an appeal body in the event Bladen desires to contest his discharge.

Judge Scott Gets Tough With Knifers

"There are too many people carrying knives, and from this day on I'm going to take them off the streets for awhile," Municipal Judge Armond Scott warned yesterday.

So saying, he imposed a straight 360-day jail sentence, the maximum for simple assault, on Raymond Montgomery, 23, of 2405 Snows ct. nw.

Montgomery was charged with cutting John Davenport, 35, of 519 L st. nw., in a fight several days ago. Montgomery contended Davenport threw a wine bottle at him. He was originally charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, but it was later reduced to simple assault.

"Seven out of every 10 cases that reach my court," Judge Scott said, "involve knifing or cutting."

Man Who Sought Dope Term Freed After Drug Habit Cure

William R. Deaton, 45, who went to prison to be freed of drug addiction, was released on parole yesterday.

Deaton, a baker, was convicted in 1948 of forgery of a drug prescription and was given a suspended sentence of 1 to 3 years. In January, 1949, however, Deaton appeared before Judge Richmond B. Keech and asked to be sentenced to the Public Health Service Hospital at Lexington, Ky. The District Court jurist said he was delighted to do so. Six months later, Deaton was pronounced cured, his lawyer declared, and attempts were made to have him released. But the court had lost jurisdiction.

Yesterday, the year was up.

4 in Plumbing Thefts Seized In Fairfax

Fairfax County police yesterday arrested four men who have allegedly stolen about $3000 worth of toilets and other plumbing from an apartment house project since last October.

Charged with grand larceny were Raymond B. Fultz, 27; Thomas O. McGovern, jr., 30; Thurman B. Campbell, 29, all of Front Royal, Va.; and Leslie P. Henry, 33, of Lincolnia, Va.

All except Campbell, police said, were employed at the Shirley-Duke apartment project on Duke st. extended, west of Alexandria, where the equipment was taken.

Detective Sergt. Joseph J. Howard said county police investigated when the police chief of Front Royal, Va., reported large quantities of plumbing material being sold there. Howard said some of the stolen articles have been recovered in Front Royal as well as about $1500 worth in Henry's home.

A preliminary hearing will be held in Fairfax County Trial Justice Court February 15.

2 Workmen Burned in Home Blasts

Two men were burned in separate accidents yesterday when industrial torches they were using—a blowtorch in one case, a welding arc in the other—set off explosions.

In Takoma Park, Md., at least $1000 damage was caused to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Davidson, 207 Philadelphia ave., by the blast of an apparently faulty blowtorch. A plumber's helper, Robert Parsley, 18, of 8902 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, suffered minor face burns.

John E. Pope, 45, also of 8902 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring the plumber, was using the torch in installing pipelines in the basement of the home.

He said the torch began to flame down its side. The blast went off as he and Mrs. Davidson tried to open a window in an adjoining kitchen to throw the torch away. Young Parsley was in the room with the torch, but was a considerable distance away. Neither Pope nor Mrs. Davidson was injured.

The explosion ripped out two casement windows in the basement, loosened partitions throughout the house, and knocked plaster from two walls.

In the second accident, Harry Kalavitinos, 31, of 7303 Valley Park rd., Carmody Hills, Md., suffered first and second degree burns of the face and hands. The welding arc he was using set off fumes from an empty tin of paint thinner in a garage at 708 6th st. nw.

He was reported in "good" condition at Emergency Hospital.

Friend's Attempt to Serve Jail Term for Yoker Fails

Andrew Foster, 35, yesterday lost his chance to serve a 3-to-9-year prison term for the man he claimed once saved his life.

The benefactor, Foster said, is Henry L. Johnson, 42, a convicted yoke robber now in District Jail. But Foster, because of a few "details," is a free man.

The story of the two friends came out in a motion for a new trial filed last week by Johnson in District Court and in the investigation which followed.

Johnson said he had learned through the jail grapevine that Foster had admitted the robbery, and that Johnson was thereby exonerated. Judge Edward A. Tamm ordered an investigation.

Foster, who was serving a 90-day term for soliciting a man for a prostitute, was brought to Bacon's office where Foster signed a "confession."

On January 19, the last day of Foster's term, Detective Vernon Culpepper, interviewed Foster. But the would-be felon had the wrong details in the case.

Foster signed a new statement admitting he was lying.

Foster said that in 1947, he had pneumonia. He was desperate and Johnson took him into his home and nursed him back to health and he hoped the judge would have mercy on him and let him serve for Johnson, but reduce the term.

Judge Tamm denied Johnson's new trial motion and Johnson went back to prison. Foster went free.

Woman Locks Self in Bath; So 4 Ransack Virginia Home

Washington police yesterday blocked all bridges into the city in an unsuccessful search for a gang of youths who broke into and robbed a home near Langley, Va.

Mrs. Margurite Mohon, 36, started the search when she phoned Fairfax police. She told them she saw the gang drive up to her home, and did not like their looks. Remembering that her front door was unlocked, she said, she fled to a bathroom and locked herself in.

After knocking at her front door, she said, two boys entered, ransacked the house. They took two men's suits, a pair of trousers, a sweater, $25 in cash, a $150 war bond, and a $150 shotgun, she told police. They made no attempt to molest her, she said.

Police here picked up four youths in an auto answering the description of the one sought. But at the Seventh Precinct station, the boys satisfied police they were not the ones sought, and they were released.

Junior Chamber Hits McAuliffe Rejection

Members of the District Board of Education should resign if they "cannot conform to the requirements of their public charge," the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce said yesterday.

In a letter to board members, Jacee President Paul Matthews "vigorously protested" board action in rejecting Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning's nomination of Miss Eleanor P. McAuliffe for the post as principal of the new Sousa Junior High School.

Board Meets Wednesday

The question of a new principal for Sousa again will be considered by the board when it meets next Wednesday.

Dr. Corning said yesterday he will make a recommendation either to the board or its committee on personnel but would not confirm that he will resubmit the nomination of Miss McAuliffe. His recommendation of Miss McAuliffe was turned down by the board at its January 18 meeting. Board President C. Melvin Sharpe said the action was "no reflection on Miss McAuliffe's record" but that a majority of board members thought Dr. Corning should have recommended another candidate.

"Deeply Concerned"

Matthews said the Junior Chamber is "deeply concerned" over the school board's injecting itself "into what is obviously an administrative matter."

The board, he said, should not use its power to confirm or reject the superintendent's choice of a candidate to force a particular appointment.

"Good administrative practice," Matthews said, "would have been for the board, in repecting a candidate, to refer the matter to the proper committee for further study, rather than airing the matter before the public."

Facile Music Of London '4' Is Rewarding

By Paul Hume
Post Reporter

The London String Quartet played an unusually balanced and rewarding concert at the Library of Congress last night.

Opening with Schubert's A Minor Quartet, they programmed the five pieces of Ernest Bloch, and finally the Ravel Quartet. The London players achieve a smooth polish in their playing which is equally facile whatever they play.

Polish does not imply any lack of fire or vitality. Their account of Schubert's melodic quartet was songful without being attenuated. The Bloch pieces, dating from 1925, are brilliant studies in writing for quartet. Evoking varying moods, they found warm reception at the Library, due in large measure to the skill with which they were played.

Maurice Ravel's sole quartet, now nearly 50 years old, is as fresh as any music written yesterday. It calls for virtuosity in all four players. The London quartet provided it.

The pizzicato section was a trifle more leisurely than customary but seemed to profit thereby. The great attacks scattered throughout the score, sounding as if they came from a full string orchestra, were admirable in tone and precision. In a concert hall acquainted with the finest in string playing, the London Quartet took a high place.

Cheverly Lights Being Installed Despite Protests

The Cheverly (Md.) town council is proceeding with installation of 35 street lights on Cheverly ave. despite protests by a group of citizens who favor an underground wiring system, Mayor Edward A. Sallom said yesterday.

Sallom said the protests developed only after actual installation of the lights had started. The project, he said, has been under consideration for nearly two years and has been "frequently discussed" at open meetings of the council. He said final approval of the project was given last June at a meeting well-attended by residents of the community, including some whose names later appeared on petitions of protest.

Members of the council, according to the mayor, feel it is too late to withdraw their action. Some preliminary work on the project already has started. He said the lights are needed to illuminate Cheverly's "most heavily-traveled thoroughfare."

Symphony Drive For Funds Hits 36 Percent Mark

The National Symphony Orchestra has 36 percent of its goal of $190,000 in the current campaign for sustaining funds.

At a midcampaign luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel, committee chairmen reported figures totalling $69,028.63 in pledges and receipts. One committee, the residential group covering Anacostia has attained its entire quota.

Samuel Spencer, chairman of the drive, announced the final luncheon will be held on Thursday, February 9.

Virginia Area School Aid Put At $895,788

Fairfax County and Falls Church will receive a total of $895,788 for school construction if Gov. John S. Battle's proposed 45-million-dollar grants-in-aid program is adopted, it was announced last night.

The announcement was made by John T. Lynch, president of the Franklin-Sherman Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association, on behalf of Delegate John T. Lynch (no relation to the P-TA president) who was unable to attend a meeting of the association last night at McLean, Va.

Accordingly, Fairfax County will get $597,392 and the City of Falls Church, $298,396 under the program.

The P-TA meeting was called to discuss the proposed $10,500,000 school construction bond issue for Fairfax County. Newell Blair, of the School Emergency Association, which backs the plan, said 2900 signatures have been obtained on petitions for a referendum on the bond issue.

Under the law, such petitions, bearing 2000 signatures or more, are presented to the county school board, which transmits them with an approving resolution to the County Circuit Court. In turn, the court is required to set a date for a referendum. Blair's announcement seemed to make a referendum certain.

G. Wallace Carper, chairman of the county board of supervisors, who favors the bond issue, told the 100 persons at the meeting that the bond issue is the "easiest way out."

School Grants Get Backing Of Magruder

J. Maynard Magruder, Arlington delegate to the General Assembly, said last night he favored Governor Battle's proposal to distribute 45 million dollars in outright grants to localities for school construction.

Magruder, who campaigned last fall on a platform, including a plank calling for State aid to schools on a matching basis, said the recent report of the committee on State and local revenues and expenditures changed his mind.

He told around 150 delegates to a two-day Institute of State and Local Revenue and Expenditures, meeting at the Mormon Church, 16th and Inglewood sts., Arlington, that he felt the overcrowding of schools was "an acute emergency, a crisis . . . if we advance money on a matching basis, there would naturally be too long a delay."

Two meetings are scheduled on today's closing day program. At 9:30 a. m., a discussion of local revenue structure will be held, followed at 1:30 p. m. by a forum on state-local fiscal relations.

Civic Group Probes School 'Rowdyism'

A special committee to investigate reports of "rowdyism" around District schools was set up last night by the Federation of Civic Associations.

Dr. E. F. Harris, who submitted the motion for the investigation, said the current reports were "no news to the federation."

A federation special committee, he recalled, investigated similar reports of school disturbances in September, 1946.

The recurrence of these reports in recent weeks, he said, indicates District officials "have not heeded" the corrective recommendations put forth by the 1946 committee.

These recommendations, Dr. Harris said, included laws against loitering around schools and increased police patrols.

On January 17 Albert N. D. Brooks, assistant principal of Banneker Junior High School, told reporters that youthful extortionists have been preying on pupils at the Banneker and Garnet-Patterson schools for at least two years.

Appointed to the special committee were Bernard Chapman, chairman, Dr. Harris, John B. Duncan, and Mrs. Julia Davis.

Meeting in the board room of the District Building, the federation adopted a resolution recommending that the South Capitol Street bridge be named after Benjamin Baneker, one of the original surveyors of Washington.

The federation voted to ask the District Commissioners to reply to an inquiry about the validity of anti-discrimination laws passed in the 1870s.

Mercer Sampson, who brought up the issue, maintained the laws were never repealed and should still be in effect. The Commissioners have not replied to an inquiry sent in seven months ago, he said.

Nonpartisan Board Urged By Educators

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A nonpartisan Federal school board to end "chaos" in the present Federal organization for education was recommended here yesterday before a meeting of the American Council on Education.

Edgar Fuller, executive secretary of the National Council of Chief State School Officers, said that a "deliberative nonpartisan board of laymen could evolve comprehensive basic policy" that would "bring order out of chaos."

He said chaos is due to the "present splintering of education functions in numerous noneducational Federal agencies and failure to recognize the need of the Federal Government for freedom from educational policy by politicians who are not educators."

To Introduce Legislation

Fuller, who spoke at the conference of constituent member representatives of the council, said that legislation setting up a Federal school board will be reintroduced soon in the Senate.

The council will wind up its two-day meeting at the Mayflower Hotel today with the consideration of resolutions and recommendations.

Fuller said that at present there is no Federal education policy.

"The political officers who have been in control of the Federal educational agency have never formulated such a policy and its professional personnel has never been in a position to do so."

He said the proposed board would "exercise general control of the policies and programs of the United States Office of Education, appoint the Commissioner of Education, and, on his nomination, appoint staff members of the Office of Education."

The Office of Education now comes under the Federal Security Administration.

Fuller's program was criticized by George D. Stoddard, president of the University of Illinois, who declared a Federal board of education would not assure that education would be protected from politics.

Asks More States

He said such a board, appointed by the President, would have little responsibility toward the people.

He urged that the Office of Education be given more status under a Department of Health, Education and Science headed by a Secretary with Cabinet rank.

Francis J. Brown, staff associate for the American Council, called for a strengthened Office of Education that would gather in educational functions now scattered among many Federal agencies.

The assembly also turned its attention to a growing interest by both Federal and State governments in education.

A. J. Brumbaugh, vice president of the council, declared "the trend is unquestionably in the direction of more and more limitation of the freedom of higher institutions by both the Federal and State governments."

Melvin A. Glasser, executive director of the Midcentury White House Conference, in addressing the dinner meeting of the convention last night said the conference is "a concentrated effort to bring to the top level of consciousness the realization that peaceful and sucesful human relations start in childhood."

He said that committees of scientists are conducting studies designed to integrate the knowledge of the needs of children and to relate that to the ways in which the home, the school, and the church are meeting the needs.

"What if you have to go to jail until you get the money?" inquired Judge Owens.

"I guess I'd just have to stay there for good," Taylor said, "because the Army doesn't pay off when you're in the jug.

Nixon Asks Non-Partisan Study to Curb Communism; Knowland, Judd Hit China Policy

By Genevieve Reynolds

REPRESENTATIVE Richard Nixon (R., Calif.) yesterday called on the Truman Administration to establish a nonpartisan body to "clean up communism" in this country. He suggested that the loyalty records of Alger Hill and others named as Communists by ex-Communist Whitaker Chambers, be investigated by this group.

Speaking before some 1000 delegates to the twenty-fourth annual Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense at the Statler Hotel, he said, "You cannot treat communistic activities on a political basis."

"I want this whole business raised above partisan politics and I want to see communism cleaned up," said Nixon. "I hope that President Truman and his Administration will launch a nonpartisan study which will open the loyalty records of Hiss and others and make a full report to the American people."

He then recommended that the Administration set up a nonpartisan body similar to that which completed the Hoover reorganization report.

Nixon, a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee, told his audience that the thick pile of documents produced by Whittaker Chambers in the recent trial in which he accused Alger Hiss of Communist espionage activity, was only part of many more incriminating documents Chambers had obtained.

Personalities Obscure Issues

The conflict of the interesting personalities of Chambers and Hiss has "obscured the full force of the conspiracy," according to Nixon.

"Some of you may say there are only 74,000 avowed party members in this country, so what's the difference? I want to remind you that when the Communists overcame the Czarist regime in Russia they had fewer members than that," he cautioned.

Native Born Communists

The Congressman stated that the majority of Communists in this country are native born, graduates of the best colleges and universities, and that those engaged in Communist activities do it because they believe in the concepts of the party, and not for money.

He added that we need a few more people in the United States today who can express the good points of our political system as eloquently as the Communists preach theirs.

Nixon recommended that the Patriotic Women's Conference, composed of representatives from 25 organizations, and totaling 3½ million members, pass a resolution commending J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI. He also asked for support of the Un-American Activities Committee.

Doubts Recognition

Speaking at the afternoon session of the conference, Angus Ward, former American Consul General to Mukden, China, who was imprisoned by the Chinese Communists expressed the belief that the United States wouldn't recognize the present Communist government in China.

"Secretary of State Acheson's courageous withdrawal of United States officials" from China indicates that "we are well out of the recognition dilemma," he said. "Personally I am delighted that we are not to recognize the Communists or any other nation which does not behave according to established standards of international law."

The former Consul General said that China today is as Communistic as Russia or any other Communist regime in Europe. Red China, he explained, follows the same political patterns, police methods and controlled movement of the people as does Soviet Russia.

Mr. Ward added that the Communists are trying to make over the ideology of the Chinese, and predicted, "We are going to lose eventually the old friendship between America and China."

Sees Russia Stronger

Mr. Ward said that the Soviet's military potential has been changed entirely by the present situation in the Far East. For example, he explained that the vast resources of Manchuria would be put to work for the Soviet Union.

Referring to his arrest and that of his staff, the Foreign Service officer said that it made fine propaganda for the Communists. "For the first time in 100 years, China has dared to humble America," he added.

China Policy Attacked

Representative Walter Judd (R., Minn.), speaker at the afternoon session, attacked the United States foreign policy in China. He said that he would continue to call for the resignation of State Department officials who had wrecked our policy in Asia. "Promote them if necessary," he advised, "but get them out of the field where they won't wreck our policy."

Declaring that we had sold China to the Communists, he said, "the greatest mistake Chiang ever made was to trust us."

As examples he cited the secret agreement made by the United States to turn Manchuria over to the Russians and our insistent demand for a Nationalist-Communist coalition government.

Senator William Knowland of California, addressing the morning session, accused the United States of following an appeasement policy in Asia. He attributed China's disaster to the State Department's policy toward that country.

Offers 6-Point Program

The Republican Senator suggested a six-point program to aid China. It includes:

1. Announce that we will not recognize the Communists;
2. Coordinate policy in Far East with Gen. Douglas MacArthur in charge;
3. Send supervised aid to China's Nationalist government like that sent to Greece and Korea. (He suggested Gen. Albert Wedemeyer to head the aid mission.)
4. Free ECA funds earmarked for China;
5. Send two or three vessels to stabilize conditions there;
6. Announce that all American personnel held in China must be released in one week or we will place an embargo on all shipping to China.

Both Knowland and Judd said that assisting China would be no greater risk than was connected with the Berlin airlift.

The American Legion's National Commander, George N. Craig, last night proposed the establishment of an armed forces school of medicine, and the creation of a Government school of diplomacy.

The medical school, he explained, would train young men selected competitively from the military services, for medical careers in the Nation's defense system.

He sees three advantages in such a school system: (1) It would make possible more efficient and more economical care of the health of those in uniform; (2) it would relieve the defense department of the necessity of competing with private medicine for a supply of doctors which is not big enough to go around; and (3) it would be the means of increasing the supply of doctors through a new channel.

Discussing the school of diplomacy, Craig said that a central diplomatic school is essential to provide a base for careers in the foreign service. He pointed out that too many American representatives abroad did not have adequate training to compete with trained diplomats from other countries.

Among other speakers were Col. C. Tyler Wood, assistant administrator for operations for ECA; Shane MacCarthy, lawyer and lecturer; Mrs. Joseph Robinson, director, Women's Division, U. S. Savings Bonds Division of the U. S. Treasury, and C. W. Boldyreff, member of Georgetown University faculty.

Snapshots at Drucie's Wedding:

"Are you next?" said a guest turning to Margaret Truman after kissing the bride. "No," said the President's daughter emphatically. "I've got too much work to do."

It was Margaret's fifth turn as a bridesmaid. But Marvin Coles, tall goodlooking usher at the wedding, boasts of having walked the bridal aisle for 19 of his pals.

The technique of catching the bride's bouquet is, according to an old hand at catching bouquets, "you really have to reach for it."

But when Drucie tossed her bouquet, it seemed to fall right into Helene Allendorfer's hands. She'll be the next bride, according to tradition, although at the moment the "one and only" hasn't shown.

Goal of Arms Aid Pact Explained

By Nicha Souré

THE Congressional Club was "thrown in a tizzy" yesterday, in the words of the program chairman, Mrs. Millard Tydings.

James Bruce, director of the foreign military assistance program, scheduled to be the guest speaker was to discuss "Argentina," a subject he knew first hand as a former American Ambassador.

But, President Truman decided to sign the Military Assistance Pact which apparently required the presence of Mr. Bruce, the director, at the ceremonies which were scheduled at the same time as the Congressional Club meeting.

Both Speakers Attend

Mrs. Tydings quickly changed plans and slated Mr. Bruce's staff assistant, John Kuhn, to speak on the Military Assistance Pact.

When the club met, both speakers were there, Mr. Bruce being able to attend because the ceremonies were held a half hour previous to the club meeting.

Mr. Bruce related his experiences in Argentina, as previously scheduled, adding only that "the Military Assistance Pact program would be difficult to administer in some cases because of the psychological influences connected with it in certain countries."

He mentioned an example in France where Communist-dominated labor unions would refuse to unload ships bearing military aid.

Explains Pact Aims

Mr. Kuhn, in a brief talk, explained the pact which would allot $1,314,010,000 for the foreign arms program. The arms program provides cash and contract authority for rearming friendly nations whose security is threatened by communism.

This pact, Mr. Kuhn said, is not an "armament race" but a means of maintaining security throughout the world. It will be administered jointly by the Department of State, the Department of Defense and the ECA.

If the countries receiving this aid were "not behaving," Mr. Kuhn said the military aid could be stopped by either the Security Council of the United Nations, President Truman or Congress.

Canasta, Congressmen Share Honors at Ball

SQUARE dancing, canasta and the Georgia congressional delegation will be the drawing cards at the Peach State party on February 4.

The dance, in the West ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, will be in honor of Senators and Congressmen from Georgia and their wives. Square dancing, the old-time dance which has swept the country anew, will invade the Society's program as a novel feature. For Georgians who would rather play bridge or canasta, card tables will be provided.

Group singing under the direction of Mrs. Clark Tate will begin at 9 p. m. The receiving line, headed by Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, president of the society, will form at 10 p. m., to be followed by dancing.

On the reception committee with Mrs. Ramspeck will be Mr. Ramspeck, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Tate, Mr. and Mrs. Lacy Hinley, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Geeslin, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Buchholz, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Thurston, Miss Julia Reynolds, Mrs. Evie Walk, Col. and Mrs. S. Gordon Green, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sharpton, Mrs. Ruby Roach and Ben Stembridge.

For further information call Mrs. Thurston at Randolph 6833.

THE Louisiana-State Society is knee-deep in plans. Cause for the concentrated work is the gala Mardi Gras ball slated by the society for February 17.

Queens of several Louisiana festivals will be on hand in the Presidential room of the Statler Hotel for the ball. Information about the society or the ball may be obtained from Felix M. Broussard, president, at Shepherd 2157.

Senator Robert Taft will be the guest speaker at the Ohio State Society McKinley Day dinner dance on Tuesday at 7 p. m. at the Washington Club.

TAKE your pick of State society dances on tonight's busy schedule!

The Mississippi State Society Military Ball will be held in the large ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. No branch of the service will be slighted. On the program will be the Singing Sergeants of the Air Corps, the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps, an Army drill team and a Navy color guard.

The congressional delegation of the Missouri Society will be honored at a reception and dance at the Shoreham Hotel, 9:30 p.m.

A dinner and dance is on the Florida State Society calendar at Hotel 2400, 7:30 to 1 a. m.

Ask Anne About Preparing Pictures for Framing

The National Gallery of Art in Washington frames its 25-cent prints of famous pictures without glass, first oiling, then shellacking the pictures. Can you tell me how I could also prepare pictures for framing so that glass covering will be unnecessary?
O. B. S.

The smaller pictures sold at the National Gallery are prepared and framed by Lewis L. Newkirk of Washington. He has very generously explained for us his shellacking process. He also has a "textured" process but that's a secret!

First, says Mr. Newkirk, he mounts the picture on stiff cardboard, using glue or thinned and strained library paste. The pictures are carefully weighted down for drying so that no wrinkles will form.

When thoroughly dry, the pictures are sprayed with an acetone-base fixative. Mr. Newkirk says you can get this fixative and a little inexpensive blower spray in almost any art supply store. The fixative seals in the ink on the print and protects it against the cutting action of the alcohol in the shellac.

The shellac can be either sprayed or brushed on. The tank type vacuum cleaner with a spray attachment can be used for this purpose. For spraying, thin down the shellac by using half alcohol, half shellac. Once sprayed on, you can give it a "mat finish" by blowing some air from the sprayer onto the picture while the surface is still "tacky." This will keep it from being so shiny.

If you brush on the shellac, use it full strength. While it's still "tacky," go over the surface with a stiff brush (without any fresh shellac) to give a mat finish.

To D. V. D., who asked for a recipe for Jewish matzoth balls for chicken soup, here is mine:

MATZOTH BALLS

Beat together 2 eggs, 1 cup matzoth flour, ½ teaspoon salt, and 3 tablespoons schmalz (rendered chicken fat). Set in refrigerator. When ready to use, shape into balls and drop in gently boiling chicken soup. Cover and don't touch for 12 minutes.
Rebecca Sands.

I was interested in the letter from M. J. H., who received a copper chafing dish for Christmas. We have one which I think must be identical with hers and I know what fun she will have.

The deep kettle we use for onion soup, the flat frying pan for crepe suzettes—but we haven't tried that very often! Our chief standby—and our favorite way to entertain—is with welsh rabbit (Fanny Farmer has a marvelous one in her cookbook, made with beer), tossed salad, a sweet, and coffee. A real feast for a Sunday evening!

Incidentally, my husband (chef on chafing dish nights) has discovered that alcohol antifreeze used in the burner will not smoke as the usual denatured alcohol does and one's lovely copper stays clean! Best of luck to M. J. H.

Will you tell me what silver dragees are? In a frosting recipe, it says to decorate with them. It shows them on a cake which looks lovely, but to me they look like miniature ball-bearings. Are they a form of candy or what? I've never seen them in the grocery stores. A. F. F.

They do look like ball-bearings, or maybe shot. But what they are is candy, as you surmised. They're also called "silver pearls." Fancy groceries often carry them and sometimes pastry shops. One in the downtown area that has them can be reached by telephoning National 4118.

Some years ago, I read of a place in New Jersey where elderly people of small means live together in a mutually cooperative community. All share the work and contribute their fair share. Do you know of such a place? M. B.
Can any reader give us information about this community?

Lingonberry jam (C. J. L. asked where to buy it in a recent letter) is sold by a delicatessen on 11th st. near the Annapolis Hotel. The telephone number is Metropolitan 8020. D. N.
Another place you can buy it, we've discovered, is at a delicatessen out on Massachusetts ave. The telephone number there is Emerson 5698.

Is there any place in town which offers some kind of course to improve your speed and understanding in reading and charges a reasonable rate? Although I am a housewife, I do research work for my husband and find I have difficulty in scanning some of the material as rapidly as I would wish.
Mrs. Ralph Whitfield.

Yes, the YWCA has such a course on its schedule for the coming term. It's designed to help the reader gain more information in a shorter time, taught by Mrs. Rosemary Dengler Plumb, specialist in speed reading.

Mrs. Plumb has taught at both the University of Maryland and George Washington, uses latest procedures and scientific equipment, including the Harvard film series and psychological tests.

To enroll, telephone Metropolitan 2100. The course starts January 30, will meet Mondays and Thursdays (7 p. m. to 9 p. m.) for 10 weeks.

Could you tell me where in town they sell Swedish (or is it "sweetish") rye bread? M. A.
Delicious Swedish rye bread is sold by a bakery on Georgia ave. The telephone number is Georgia 5500.

If H. W., who wanted bamboo for lamp making, can use some ½-inch or less in diameter and still green, she can have some gratis at the following address: 6613 North Washington blvd., East Falls Church, Va. L. H. W.

Too charming to live in, of all the charming homes that I have seen during my life, this one takes the prize. Entering from front porch to living room, we have a feeling of spaciousness because of the studio ceiling of some 20 ft. in height. At the end of the living room is an attractive stone fireplace, with winding stairway to Romeo and Juliet balcony, thru balcony to 3d bedroom or den. 2 rooms and bath on 1st floor, dining room, modern equipped kitchen, ample basement, h.-w. h., stone patio in attractive rear lot. Everything about this home appears to have been done with a magic touch. Well, worth your while to inspect at $15,900.

EARLY, AIN'T I?
Well, anyway, here's a real spring buy for you. A never titled 1949 Chrysler T and C convertible coupe with black panels and that cool looking yellow upholstery. Come in and look at it and you will agree with me it is the smartest looking car on the road. It's America's most luxurious motor car. The last word in fine styling yet has all of Chrysler's famous comfort-room-safety and unexcelled performance.
And the price, sure it's high, everything that's any good is high but now listen to this—we promise to save you at least $800 in the purchase of this fine car. That in itself is savings enough to pay for that vacation you are now planning. So plan to come in and see it in one of Virginia's most modern show rooms, and shop in luxury and comfort.

Drop of 38 Degrees Brings Cold Weather

Washington's temperature yesterday dropped 38 degrees from Thursday's all-time high of 79.1 degrees for the winter months.

The top came at 2:20 p. m. Thursday, but by 6:58 a. m. yesterday it was a comparatively nippy 41.

And, said the Weather Bureau, it will get colder today. After nighttime temperatures of about 29 for the city and about 27 in the suburbs, the day will be mostly cloudy and rather cold: High near 40.

There's even a chance of rain or snow this afternoon.

Meanwhile, the same broad cold front that chilled Washington also covered most of the East and South yesterday. In the northern plains, where it originated, it produced serious shortages in regions of North Dakota and Minnesota.

That warm spell produced some strange inconsistencies for January—like reports of Japanese beetles in nearby Maryland.

But the Agriculture Department yesterday just wouldn't believe such things. No ...!

The "grubs" of the pestiferous beetles are in the ground, all right, said department experts. But they have to do considerable eating before they actually become respectably hard-backed bugs.

In June—OK, but not in any June in January. As a concession, the department said it would like to see samples—the quote marks are theirs—of "Japanese beetles."

Just send them in.

The Weather

Maryland—Mostly sunny and cold with high in middle 30 in northern portion and in low 40 in southern portion. Sunday—Some cloudiness with rising temperatures.

Virginia—Fair with the high from 38 to 42 in the northern portion. Partly cloudy with high in middle 40s in the south. Sunday—Some cloudiness with rising temperatures.

District of Columbia and Vicinity—Mostly sunny and rather cold with high about 40. Sunday—Some cloudiness with rising temperatures.

Winds—Northeasterly about 10 to 15 miles per hour.

Departures From Normal Yesterday—Accumulated excess of temperature since January 1, 1950, 128 degrees. Accumulated deficiency of precipitation since January 1, 1950, 1.95 inches. Temperature one year ago this date—High, 44; low, 38.

Sun, Moon, Tides, River (EST)—Sun rises, 7:14 a. m.; sets 5:23 p. m.; moon rises 11:46 a. m.; sets 1:55 a. m. Tides—High, 2:11 a. m. and 2:43 p. m.; low, 9:14 a. m. and 10:01 p. m. (Coast and Geodetic Survey). Potomac River clear at Great Falls. (United States Engineers).

Sailor Held For Assault With Auto

James E. Porter, 33, a Navy chief petty officer, yesterday was held in $500 bond for a continued hearing next Thursday on charges of assaulting a policeman.

According to police, Porter tried to run down Pvt. Walter Behe of the Third Precinct early yesterday when the latter approached Porter's car parked in the 1000 block of New Hampshire av. nw., with Porter and a male companion seated inside.

Behe leaped to one side and Porter drove off. The policeman gave chase in a scout car and captured Porter in the 2800 block of M st. nw. Two shots fired by the officer as Porter drew away the first time knicked front and rear tires of the latter's car. Porter's companion escaped from the car during the chase.

Doctor Calls Carol Insane At Slaying

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 27 (AP).—Carol Ann Paight's physician, saying "a mind can become diseased in a few moments," today asserted she was insane when she killed her cancer-doomed father.

The State jumped on his testimony, given at the 21-year-old girl's mercy-slaying trial by Dr. William E. Smth, with a stiff, 3-hour examination.

He admitted that many of Carol Ann's acts just after he had told her her father could not live were logical.

After the shooting, he conceded under cross-examination, she gave intelligent answers to questions put to her by Dr. Clifford Morse, the psychiatrist called in as a consultant.

But the intelligence of her answers, he said, was due to a drug he said he had prescribed as a sedative.

P-TA Square Dance

'Hot-Rod' Artist Is Sentenced

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police have nothing on Precinct Detective E. A. Sadler of the Eighth Precinct. Richard Martin Jansson, 19, of 4404 Greenwich pkwy. nw., found this out yesterday when he drew a 10-day straight jail sentence from Municipal Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

Jansson pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving, and an additional $5 fine or 5 days for driving a car with dead tags.

The Sadler-Jansson pursuit began the evening of January 5, according to Sadler, when Jansson sped away from him several times on heavily traveled streets and boulevards in the Northwest section. Jansson drove a "hot rod," Sadler said, describing it as a "souped up" 1939 Ford coupe.

Sadler drove his own car, he said, and Jansson pulled away from him as though he were dragging an anchor.

Then, last Sunday, Sadler spotted Jansson again, pursued him again, and lost him again.

By that time, Sadler had alerted 8th precinct scout cars. Thursday, Pvts. Raymond Crist and H. E. Davis spotted the "hot rod" parked in the 2900 block of Brandywine st. nw., and notified Sadler. He took up a vigil until Jansson approached the car. That time, Jansson didn't get away.

Five Youths Seized for Radio Thefts

A gang of five youths, including a juvenile girl and a juvenile boy, were arrested yesterday by Alexandria and Washington police as a result of their efforts to crack a wave of automobile radio thefts in the area.

Police said they recovered a stolen Cadillac with two-way radio, at least nine stolen car radios, and two other stolen two-way car radio outfits taken from Yellow Cabs here.

Held were:

Reed S. Wilson, 18, of 2925 26th st. ne., arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence on a charge of interstate transportation of the Cadillac stolen in Toledo, Ohio. He was held in lieu of $1000 bond. Police said he is implicated in the Alexandria car-radio thefts, and also is wanted in Maryland on a charge of grand larceny of radios. Wilson was identified as the youth who sent "phantom plane" radio messages to Bolling Air Force Base from an illegal radio transmitter in 1948.

Richard K. Betts, 22, of 612 E st. ne., and Paul Caruso, 19, of 107 E. Glendale ave., Alexandria, pleaded guilty to five charges of grand larceny each in Alexandria Civil and Police Court. Judge James R. Duncan ordered them held in $2000 bond each for grand jury action.

Betts' juvenile wife, and a Washington boy, also under 18, were held in Alexandria for Juvenile Court action there on grand larceny charges.

Traffic Key To Business, Group Told

"A community cannot be economically healthy unless there is a good inexpensive transportation and ample parking," members of the Board of Trade's traffic committee were warned yesterday.

The warning came from D. Grant Mickle, director of the traffic engineering division, Automotive Safety Foundation, at a luncheon meeting at the Burlington Hotel.

Businessmen, in particular, must strive to conquer the "traffic problem" if they hope to keep business in downtown shopping districts, he declared. He described the traffic problem as the sum of three other major problems: congestion and delay, lack of terminal or parking facilities, and traffic accidents.

Mickle advised committee members not to consider the problem as "hopeless." He pointed out that records show that within a quarter of a century, the death rate on roads and streets has been brought down to about one third of what it had been.

The traffic accident situation is still "deplorable," but in many cities the problem is being taken in hand and eventually will be just about conquered, he added.

Mickle cited the work being done in Pittsburg, Los Angeles and Baltimore to solve their traffic problems. He also described Silver Spring, Md., as a boom town, whose expansion generally is attributed to its forward-looking parking program. Because of its rapid growth, however, the city is now faced with a growing congestion problem, which must be met with adequate street facilities, he added.

Mickle said there is no one answer to the traffic problem, but added that it can be solved only when it is recognized and handled like other vital community services.

Wartime Dinner With Queen Mary Not 'Hilarious'

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

WHEN we arrived at the palace they took me to my rooms and explained that I could have only a small fire in my sitting room and one in the outer waiting room, and said they hoped I would not be too cold. Through the windows they pointed out the shell holes.

Buckingham Palace seemed enormous to me. The suite I had was so huge that after Elliott saw it he said I would have to take the long corridor in the White House for my bedroom after I got home, because the one I had used before would never again seem adequate. The wardrobes were wonderful—the kind one longs for at home—but the 55-pound limit on baggage made my few clothes look pathetic hanging in those wardrobes. I wondered what the maid thought when she unpacked them. One evening dress, two day dresses, one suit and a few blouses, one pair of day shoes and one pair of evening shoes—this was my wardrobe for a visit to Buckingham Palace! One of the newspaperwomen, for want of something better to write about, reported that I had worn the soles of my one pair of shoes through. The head usher at the White House read that story and very thoughtfully sent me another pair.

Everything in Great Britain was done as you would expect it to be. The restrictions on heat and water and food were observed as carefully in the royal household as in any other home in England. There was a plainly marked black line in my bathtub, above which I was not supposed to run the water. We were served on gold and silver plates, but our bread was the same kind of war bread every other family had to eat, and except that occasionally game from one of the royal preserves appeared on the table we had nothing different in the way of food from what was served in any of the war canteens.

With the King and Queen I had my first real look at the devastation—blocks upon blocks of rubble. Our first stop was at St. Paul's Cathedral, partly because the king and queen wanted to give the watchers, who had been so faithful and who had saved the cathedral, the satisfaction of a visit from them at that time, but also so that I could stand on the steps and see what modern warfare would do to a great city.

At Chequers

I SPENT a weekend at Chequers, the county estate given by Lord Lee to the British government for the use of British prime ministers. There I watched Mr. Churchill playing a game on the floor with his grandson and noticed the extraordinary resemblance between the two. The prime minister once remarked that his grandson didn't look like him, that he, the prime minister, just looked like all babies.

Mrs. Churchill is a very attractive, young-looking and charming person. One feels that, being in public life, she has had to assume a role and that the role is now a part of her. One wonders what she is like underneath. She is very careful not to voice any opinions publicly or to associate with any political organizations. This I felt was true of the wives of all the public officials whom I met in England. As I have seen more of Mrs. Churchill over the years my admiration and affection for her have grown. She has had no easy role to play in life, but she has played it with dignity and charm.

For security reasons I had to have a code name, and someone with a sense of humor—I suspected my husband—had decided that "Rover" was appropriate. Tommy was "Assistant Rover." A hypothetical organization called "Rover's Rangers" had been organized by the young men at the United States Embassy in London with my husband as "The Starter."

After lunch one day we were scheduled to visit Elliott's unit at a place called Steeple Morden, but the chauffeur, who for my protection was a Scotland Yard man and not a regular chauffeur, lost his way, and we could not find the camp. No one who was asked would tell us how to get there—also for security reasons—so finally someone telephoned back to the United States Embassy: "Rover has lost her pup," and asked for directions!

Occasionally at some of the American Red Cross clubs I would come across a boy from some place in the United States who had seen me at home, and because we were both in a foreign country close to war we would experience a feeling of intimacy we would never have known had we met somewhere in the United States.

Collected Names

IT WAS during this visit to England that I started the practice, which I continued on subsequent trips, of collecting from the boys to whom I talked the names and addresses of their families so that I could write to them on my return to the United States. I had quite a collection before I was through.

I also made a tour of the camps where our servicemen were stationed and ended it by spending one night with Queen Mary at Badminton. This was something that Franklin had particularly wanted me to do because King George V and Queen Mary had been kind to his mother. I think he thought of Queen Mary as being in some ways rather like his mother and, therefore, made a point of my paying my respects to her.

Here again I had the same sense of strain that I had felt before visiting Buckingham Palace. I was told that we must arrive at 6 o'clock—not 5 minutes before or 5 minutes after but at 6 sharp. To my surprise Queen Mary met me at the door and took me to her sitting room, a small room—the only small one in that house, so far as I could see—and it had a good fire. After a talk she took me to my room, which, though very cold and barnlike, was very grand with Chinese Chippendale furniture. She showed me where the bathroom and w. c. were. They were cold too.

After dinner, which was not a hilarious meal and at which I made valiant efforts at conversation, we went into the drawing room and stood for 15 minutes. Queen Mary looked very regal and every inch a queen, with many ropes of pearls and many sparkling bracelets and rings. She wore a black velvet evening gown and an ermine jacket. Then she asked me to her sitting room and also asked the princess royal if she wished to accompany us. Tommy was left with the others and soon escaped. I looked in on her, when I was politely dismissed to go to bed, and found her already in bed, for it was the only way to keep warm. However, I really enjoyed my visit and have a great admiration and real affection for Queen Mary.

Even on this first visit, I recognized her thoughtfulness of others and the Spartan demands she makes on herself. Every little detail of what she considers the proper treatment of guests she carries through. For instance, she was up on the morning I left before 9 o'clock to see me off at the door and to submit to protographs, which I thought showed great self-discipline.

From Missouri

THERE was one story told about her which I heard on this first visit and greatly enjoyed. On one of her drives she picked up an American GI. After a little while she asked him if he knew who had picked him up, and he said: "No, Ma'am." She decided not to tell him, because it would be easy for him to find out. She asked him questions about his home, his life in the Army and how he liked the British people. As he was getting out she relented and said: "I am Queen Mary," and he responded: "Oh, are you? Well I'm from Missouri, and you'll have to show me." Thereupon she gave him some little thing to prove that he had been with her.

As a memento for me to bring back to Franklin she gave me a photograph of herself fully dressed with hat, veil and gloves, sawing a dead limb off a tree, with one of her dispatch riders, a young Australian, at the other end of the saw. She told me to tell my husband that she cared as much about conservation of trees as he did and was sending this photograph to prove it. I think nothing I brought him from that trip give him more pleasure than that photograph and its accompanying message.

Back in London I had dinner with the Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill. The dinner was small, and the guests were Mr. Bredan Bracken, Minister of Information; Lady Denman, head of the Women's Land Army; Lady Limerick of the British Red Cross; Dame Rachel Crowdy, whom I had met in the United States; General Brooks, chief of staff; Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Miss Thompson.

During dinner I had a slight difference of opinion with Prime Minister Churchill on the subject of Loyalist Spain. The prime minister asked Henry Morgenthau whether we, the United States, were sending "enough" to Spain and whether it was reaching there safely. Henry Morgenthau told him that he hoped we were, and I said I thought it was a little too late—that we should have done something to help the Loyalists during their civil war.

Mr. Churchill said he had been for the Franco government until Germany and Italy went into Spain to help Franco. I remarked that I could not see why the then existing government could not have been helped, and the prime minister replied that he and I would have been the first to lose our heads if the Loyalists had won—the feeling against people like us would have spread. I said that losing my head was unimportant, whereupon he said: "I don't want you to lose your head, and neither do I want to lose mine." Then Mrs. Churchill leaned across the table and said: "I think perhaps Mrs. Roosevelt is right." The prime minister was quite annoyed by this time and said: "I have held certain beliefs for 60 years, and I'm not going to change now." Mrs. Churchill then got up, as a signal that dinner was over.

Travel Problem

AS THE TIME for my return trip approached, my husband, Ambassador Winant and the prime minister discussed how I should travel. Both Ambassador Winant and Mr. Churchill pointed out that, while I might not be concerned personally with the possibility of the Germans discovering I was on a plane bound for Lisbon and forcing us down, I would be jeopardizing the other passengers. Finally, after many talks over the transatlantic telephone, my husband, who did not want me to travel on a military plane, at last gave in and said: "I don't care how you send her home, just send her."

I had said goodbye to Elliott before he left with his group for Africa, and my heart was a little heavy as I saw him go. We finally left for Prestwick on November 15 by the night-train, and the next day we boarded the plane. I thought the crew looked rather astonished when we walked out to get on board, but not till we were safely in the air and some way out to sea did one of them tell us: "We thought we were waiting for two generals. We could not imagine when two ladies came who they could be."

We landed safely in the Washington airport the next morning, where my husband met us.

War trip number one was over!

AA Successful in Prisons

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 27 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey says Alcoholics Anonymous in State prisons are a "startling success."

Units were established about three years ago in Sing Sing, Attica and Wallkill Prisons with outside members of AA cooperating.

Since then, 100 inmates of Wallkill who joined AA behind bars have been released.

"Only five of them have returned to drinking since they left," Dewey reported, "and none have returned to crime."

He said two former prisoners are working as AA organizers.

Exact figures on Sing Sing and Attica were not available. However, it is estimated 83 percent of the freed AA members from Sing Sing and 80 percent from Attica are "still on the wagon."

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Survey Runs Counter to Cold Logic

Do you cough and sneeze? Does your body ache? Is your chest as congested as a rush-hour bus? Is there a taste in your mouth like the inside of a motorman's glove? In short—do you have a cold?

If the answer is "yes," go hang your head in shame. You are a statistical monstrosity.

According to a privately conducted survey just completed, "the incidence of colds in Washington is less than elsewhere."

That's what the manufacturer of a nationally-known cold remedy learned from a survey of this area that was undertaken in connection with a sales compaign. District Liners just refuse to cooperate by catching colds.

So said the statistics. So I called the Public Health Service.

"Is id drue," I inquired, sneezing only once, "that Washigdonians hab fewer codes than beoble in odder cidies?"

"Oh, no," came the answer. "We have lots of codes here. The State Department has a very fine one; or you might try the Pentagon, or . . ."

"Do, do," I remonstrated, "not codes. I mean codes. Like codes in the head. Hu-hu-hu-HEP-CHEW!"

"Gesundheit," said the voice at the other end. "You mean colds. But we wouldn't know about that. You see, we keep statistics on communicable diseases only, and a cold is not considered a communicable disease."

"It's nob?" I echoed in disbelief. "Then where did I get mine?"

"I'm sorry, sir," came the businesslike reply. "We do not have that information."

This is certainly a fine how-do-you-do. Washington, world capital for colds, sinus disorders and allied ailments, is now alleged to have a smaller incidence of colds than other American cities.

What's worse, the Public Health Service does not consider colds "communicable," which certainly makes a liar out of my wife, who insists that she got her cold from me.

And the crowning blow is that, according to the cold remedy firm's survey, I am a social outcast for bucking the community's folkways and mores and getting a cold to begin with. Or maybe this isn't a cold at all. Maybe it's a hangnail that's making me wheeze so.

Frankly, I think I need help. Will some kind reader please verify my suspicion that I am not the only Washingtonian who has a cold this week?

DENT TAXES CREDULITY

District Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent has handed the Commissioners some shocking recommendations.

He thinks the District ought to eliminate some taxes—starting with the personal property tax.

In an era in which new taxes are forever being added but nobody ever repeals an existing levy, Mr. Dent's proposal is nothing short of revolutionary.

However, he may have a bit of difficulty in convincing Congress to give its approval. Even in an election year.

This is one "District" in which Congressmen can't hope to pick up any votes.

But regardless of how it all turns out, I think the Smithsonian should buy the original draft of the Dent proposal and keep it under glass forevermore.

"Cute 1-year-old fox terrier; gentle with children." (Juniper 7-8285.)

IT'S DONE WITH MIRRORS

The Board of Education is going to hire 53 new teachers with $81,000 which is available because of "savings the Board has been able to make this year."

It's probably the $81,000 they saved by not hiring the 53 teachers they needed last fall.

MAIL BAG:

Dear Bill:

My sister-in-law in Oklahoma writes that she is getting 25 cents a dozen for her eggs. But at the Government cafeteria where I sometimes eat, I pay 12 cents for one egg.

Edward Davidson

Dear Ed:

It looks like the Administration's price support program has laid an egg. Retail prices are still pretty high, in spite of a vast surplus of rotting eggs.

Maybe we should have listened to Mr. Hoover. Instead of caves full of eggs that nobody wants we'd at least have wound up with a chicken in every pot.

Bill.

"PROBLEM CHILDREN"—A REAL DANGER IN PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY

by

Agnes E. Meyer

Second article—this Sunday

Broken homes, working mothers, neglected children, overcrowded schools—all contribute to the destructive bewilderment and too-early marriages of Prince Georges County school children.

One way to combat these dangerous problems is through an adequate school program. But the schools need more space, wider facilities and increased personnel, to be of any help to these children, many of whom are virtually orphans though their parents live with them under the same roof.

In this second article, Mrs. Meyer discusses the effect on young people of unsettled homes and over-taxed school facilities. Nearly half of the mothers of Prince Georges school children have full-time jobs.

Every taxpayer, educator and parent in Prince Georges County should read these articles on the vital subject of educating America's future citizens.

The Washington Merry-Go Round

Explosion Threatens in GOP

By Drew Pearson

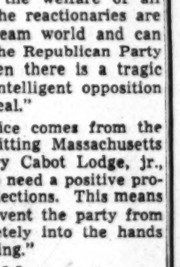
It looks like an explosion was brewing inside the Republican Party.

A Senator's snort plus troubled questions are portents of trouble.



Sen. Millikin

The snort came from that merry old soul of Republican conservatism, the delightful and brainy Eugene Millikin of Colorado, at an outraged gathering of minority Senators.

Senator Millikin, an important looking man with a huge, bald head, listened with an amused twinkle to gripes hurled at the Republican National Committee. Then he snorted: "The trouble with the national committee is they are living in an antediluvian age."

Coming from Millionaire Senator Millikin, this is extremely significant, yet it's typical of the reaction of moderate Republicans to the high, wide and handsome campaign by the party's rightwing against "me-tooism."

Another troubled question was raised recently by Vic Johnston, conscientious man-of-all-work for the GOP congressional campaign committee. He inquired of Republican friends: "What can I tell my son? He wrote from college that he's considering leaving the Republican Party because he thinks it does not offer anything for youth."

Advice Unheeded

Two "progressive" Republicans have answers, but so far they haven't been listened to. Scholarly Senator Irving Ives of New York advises: "To attract the support essential to our success, we Republicans must stand for things. We must show that we have genuine solicitude for the welfare of all the people. The reactionaries are living in a dream world and can only destroy the Republican Party at a time when there is a tragic need for an intelligent opposition to the Fair Deal."

Similar advice comes from the young, hard-hitting Massachusetts Senator, Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., who says: "We need a positive program to win elections. This means a fight to prevent the party from falling completely into the hands of the right wing."

Other Rumbles

Other signs of the coming explosion are:

1. "Wild Bill" Langer, the bull-throated Independent from North Dakota, was calmly eating in the Senate restaurant when GOP Leader Ken Wherry strolled by. The mere sight of Wherry aroused Langer to an angry snarl.

"They're trying to read me out of the party," he said, "and there goes one of the so-and-sos who'd like to do it. But I'll show them. I've been stomping up and down North Dakota and the people don't want to go back to McKinley."

2. Republican regulars in Oregon, backed up by lumber interests and a $150,000 campaign kitty, are preparing a 90-day "blitzkrieg" against progressive Senator Wayne Morse in the GOP primary.

3. Last straw for many Republicans in Congress was a demand that they buy blocks of tickets for the Lincoln Day "box supper" at the Uline Arena in Washington. Senator Morse sent the tickets back with a note, "I cannot afford to spend this money. I need it in my own campaign, and I am quite sure I will not receive any financial support from the National Committee."

Acidly commented Senator Lodge: "This is a new low from the high of Abraham Lincoln. There are too many big-time lobbyists mixed up in this affair. This is not the way to win confidence in the party."

Note—What GOP strategists seem to forget is that in order to win elections they have to woo away Democratic votes. It isn't enough merely to get the same number of Republican voters. The man most successful in winning Democratic votes has been Governor Earl Warren of California, who, when last elected, had both the Democratic and the Republican nominations.

'Down' on Thomas

Gruff Senator Elmer Thomas, the Oklahoma dude, is catching it plenty back home for gallivanting around Europe and his crusty remarks about Sweden.

A sample is the blunt comment of Mayor Earl Ward of Pryor, Okla. This community, with the help of Senator Bob Kerr and the Congressional delegation, put up a real campaign to get the 100 million dollar air force wind tunnel laboratory.

When Oklahoma lost out; the mayor said to Representative Mike Monroney: "I want to thank you, Mike, and Bob Kerr, too. But what I want to know is where was Elmer Thomas in our hour of need? I'll tel you. He was off fooling around with the Swedes in Sweden and getting mad because they didn't bow low enough to him."

Di Salle Is Comer

Mike Di Salle, vigorous young mayor of Toledo, who shot out of the cannon with a bang in the Ohio Senatorial race. On the same day he announced, Di Salle grabbed the potent support of Mayor Tom Burke of Cleveland.

Result will be a rough-and-tumble scrap for the Democratic nomination between Di Salle, who had made labor peace history with his Toledo management council, and "Jumpin' Joe" Ferguson, the State auditor.

The young mayor is a comer. He is president of the Ohio Council of Mayors, went overseas last year as a delegate to the International Mayors' powwow, and has been awarded a doctorate by Notre Dame for his pace-setting work in labor relations.

THE SUREST way we know to get rid of the winter doldrums is to pay a visit today to Center Market City. The place literally smells of spring!

While the daffodils, tulips and pussy willows have a great deal to do with it—it's mostly the beautiful fruit and vegetable stands that really get you in the mood.

PERHAPS you'd like a spring salad. Fresh lettuce, radishes, young onions, red cabbage, escarole and chickory are all on hand.

Florida tomatoes are arriving at such stands at Keystone Produce Co., stands 221-222. The sweetest garden peas you've tasted in many a moon are coming in from Mexico. You'll have to taste them to believe it.

Florida and California are responsible for the majority of fresh fruit and vegetable items this week.

Of course, Florida is sending most of the citrus fruit right now. The recent California freezes had a lot to do with the rise in price, too. Wonderful big naval oranges are on hand from California, though.

Citrus prizes include grapefruit, tangerines, tangelos, limes and oranges by the bushels.

D'Anjou pears and Delicious apples are in abundant supply from Oregon and Washington. The D'Anjou is a delicious pear and you should try it if you haven't yet tasted it.

Rhubarb is coming in from Michigan hothouses, but it is not in too abundant supply. Puerto Rico is sending us her pineapples. They're good, but Hawaii knows how to grow them better.

YOU SOUTHERNERS will be delighted to know that black-eyed peas continue to be plentiful. Maine potatoes are in the same class. And good old green peppers from California are here for salads and garnishes.

SOMETHING in the way of a gourmet item is the Hachiya persimmon, the giant Japanese persimmon. It's very good with brown sugar for a breakfast treat—or good alone.

Florida is sending in string beans and strawberries. The strawberries are down a bit in price this week. Leeks are plentiful and so are cucumbers and parsley.

California continues to send in pomegranates—another exotic fruit for salads. Fresh dates are on hand, too.
